networks and interrelated dynamics will show spatio temporal patterns which will be difficult to predict by means of our usual tools As a consequence academic research is increasingly being required to play an active role in addressing new ways of understanding and forecasting the sets of interacting structures ranging from the technical to the organizational and from the social to the economic and political levels while at the same time incorporating concerns about the new economy environment society information and technology It is now evident that social science especially spatial and economic science needs innovative paths together with continuous cross fertilization among the many disciplines involved In order to investigate these intriguing perspectives we seem to have embarked on an era of methodological reflections rather than developing strong theoretical foundations This volume aims to provide an overview of these new insights and frontiers for theoretical methodological studies and research applications in the space economy

History of Regional Science and the Regional Science Association International Walter Isard, 2012-12-06 It is difficult if not impossible to establish the point of time at which a new field of study starts to emerge While the date of formal organization of a society associated with the field can be precisely stated such timing says little about when and where the seeds for a field's development were planted Also such timing says little about the essential why for the development of a field and provides little understanding of the path that it traced It is clear that the emergence of the field of regional science like many other fields was dependent on a particular setting as well as the pattern of events and interaction of diverse personalities who became involved As best I can I shall attempt in this Part I of the History to unravel the where when and why questions in the development of Regional Science and the Regional Science Association International Further in the last section of this essay I shall briefly point up some potentialities for analytical advances in the field of regional science Also I shall note the opportunity for leadership by regional scientists in attacking global and regional development problems thereby to help formulate relevant policy In this way I hope to expose the potential for fruitful research by young scholars interested in entering the field Regional Science in Developing Countries Manas Chatterji,Kaizong Yang,2016-07-27 Developing countries are suffering from the multiple and overlapping problems of poverty malnutrition excessive population growth and also the increased environmental pollution due to rapid industrialization and urbanization particularly in the existing urban centres The migration from rural areas of agricultural population to urban areas is making this situation more problematic The lack of established institutions leads to the failure of public policy no matter how efficiently it is formulated The book discusses the major regional developmental problems in poor countries covering economic social and environmental problems It deals with case studies for a set of individual countries and discusses their unique problems investigating how the established methods of regional science can be used to solve some of these problems The Oxford Handbook of Land Economics Joshua M.
