Letters John Barth,1994 Basically Barth takes several people from his early novels and has them all starting to write to each other and to him their letters and experiences directing the plot And what starts out as what could be a too cute literary trick winds up being extremely revealing as the characters pour themselves into the letters regardless of whom they're writing to as the plot skips and slips through time On one level it acts as a sequel to those early novels continuing their stories and although it's not really required to read those books I'm not going to pretend it doesn't help The best thing to do would be to read those old novels in one block and then move onto this I read them some years ago so I was a little fuzzy on the finer points But I picked it up But Barth captures the voices of his old characters well and even if you didn't know who was writing what letter you could tell And thus they tell the recipient and us about their hopes and fears they mingle together they lie they come unglued and by the end you sort of get a tapestry of their thoughts There's a plot weaving through here but sometimes it becomes hard to connect it with six different people discussing different angles of it with you but I just went with it and enjoyed the writing for what it was Michael Battaglia at Amazon.com The Cavalier,1914

Preacher Woman Sings the Blues Richard J. Douglass-Chin,2001 Preacher Woman Sings the Blues begins with the study of black evangelists Belinda Jarena Lee and Zilpha Elaw continuing with Rebecca Cox Jackson Sojourner Truth Julia Foote Amanda Smith Elizabeth and Virginia Broughton The author's discussion of Zora Neale Hurston focuses on how Hurston operates as a connection between early black women evangelist writers and black women writing in America today He ends with the works of Alice Walker Toni Morrison and Toni Cade Bambara By examining the early traditions prefiguring contemporary African American women's text and the impact that race and gender have on them Douglas Chin shows how the nineteenth century black women's works are still of utmost importance to many African American writers today Preacher Woman Sings the Blues makes a valuable contribution to literary criticism and theoretical analysis and will be welcomed by scholars and students alike Book Jacket The Woman with the Fan Robert Hichens,1904 A Woman of Forty Esmé Stuart,1893 American Aberdeen-Angus Herd Book American Angus Association,1914 Unofficial Ambassadors Donna Alvah,2007-04-01 As thousands of wives and children joined American servicemen stationed at overseas bases in the years following World War II the military family represented a friendlier more humane side of the United States campaign for dominance in the Cold War Wives in particular were encouraged to use their feminine influence to forge ties with residents of occupied and host nations In this untold story of Cold War diplomacy Donna Alvah describes how these unofficial ambassadors spread the United States perception of itself and its image of world order in the communities where husbands and fathers were stationed cultivating relationships with both local people and other military families in private homes churches schools women s clubs shops and other places Unofficial Ambassadors reminds us that in addition to soldiers and world leaders ordinary people make vital contributions to a nation s military engagements Alvah broadens the scope of the history of the Cold War by analyzing how ideas about gender family race and culture shaped the U S military presence abroad
