Cognitive Automation and Organizational Psychology Alexander D. Stajkovic, Kayla Sergent, 2019-06-10 Jobs that were once well defined are now multifaceted New realities have placed a premium on employee cognitive processing to fulfill complex occupational roles But human conscious cognitive capacity is limited making it nearly impossible for employees to keep up without being overloaded Stajkovic and Sergent refute the common assumption that technological automation is the only way forward Instead they directly tackle the issue of employee cognitive overload by proposing cognitive automation as an alternative solution The authors present a sampling of cutting edge research showing that conscious guidance is not required for all goal pursuits goal directed behavior at work can be automated via priming of subconscious goals Building on research in social psychology and organizational behavior Stajkovic and Sergent introduce four models to explain how subconscious goals are primed in organizations Auto motive model Repeated practice with a goal makes cognitive automation possible Goal contagion Observing and inferring goals of others creates cognitive automation Means goal priming Confidence in your goal pursuit enhances cognitive automation A history of reinforcement Money feedback and social recognition used to reinforce goal achievement become associated with the goal resulting in cognitive automation The authors canvas a broad range of knowledge concerning the problem of employee cognitive overload in contemporary organizations and rely on multidisciplinary research to propose cognitive automation as a solution that can address it directly This book is a deep well of valuable information for those interested in solving real work problems with application of science of organizational behavior SOB
