Gender and Discourse Deborah Tannen, 1994-07-07 Deborah Tannen's You Just Don't Understand spent nearly four years in cloth and paper on The New York Times Best Seller list and has sold over a million and a half copies. Clearly Tannen's insights into how and why women and men so often misunderstand each other when they talk has touched a nerve. For years a highly respected scholar in the field of linguistics, she has now become widely known for her work on how conversational style differences associated with gender affect relationships. Her life work has demonstrated how close and intelligent analysis of conversation can reveal the extraordinary complexities of social relationships including relationships between men and women. Now in Gender and Discourse Tannen has gathered together six of her scholarly essays including her newest and previously unpublished work in which language and gender are examined through the lens of sex class linked patterns rather than sex linked patterns. These essays provide a theoretical backdrop to her best selling books and an informative introduction which discusses her field of linguistics, describes the research methods she typically uses and addresses the controversies surrounding her field as well as some misunderstandings of her work. She argues for instance that her cultural approach to gender differences does not deny that men dominate women in society nor does it ascribe gender differences to women's essential nature. The essays themselves cover a wide range of topics. In one she analyzes a number of conversational strategies such as interruption, topic raising, indirection and silence and shows that contrary to much work on language and gender, no strategy exclusively expresses dominance or submissiveness in conversation. Interruption or overlap can be supportive, silence and indirection can be used to control. It is the interactional context, the participants' individual styles and the interaction of their styles Tannen shows that result in the balance of power. She also provides a fascinating analysis of four groups of males and females: second sixth and tenth grade students and twenty five year olds conversing with their best friends and she includes an early article co-authored with Robin Lakoff that presents a theory of conversational strategy illustrated by analysis of dialogue in Ingmar Bergman's Scenes from a Marriage. Readers interested in the theoretical framework behind Tannen's work will find this volume fascinating. It will be sure to interest anyone curious about the crucial yet often unnoticed role that language and gender play in our daily lives.

Gender and Discourse Ruth Wodak, 1997-10-03 The contributors to this collection offer an essential introduction to the ways in which feminist linguistics and critical discourse analysis have contributed to our understanding of gender and sex. By examining how these perspectives have been applied to these concepts, the contributors provide both a review of the literature as well as an opportunity to follow the most recent debates in this area. Gender and Discourse brings together European, American and Australian traditions of research. Through an analysis of a range of real data, the contributors demonstrate the relevance of these theoretical and methodological insights for gender research in particular and social practice in general.

Gender in Interaction Bettina Baron,Helga Kotthoff,2002-04-12 In this volume gender is seen as a communicative achievement and as a social category interacting with other social parametres such as age status prestige institutional and ethnic frameworks cultural and situative contexts The authors come from a variety of backgrounds such as sociology of communication anthropological linguistics sociolinguistics social psychology and text linguistics Masculinity and femininity are conceived of as varying culturally historically and contextually All contributions discuss empirical research of communication and the question of whether and how gender is a salient variable in discourse So one aim of the book is to trace the varying relevance of gender in interaction Emotion politics ideology body concepts and speech styles are related to ethnographic description of the contexts within which communication takes place These contexts range from private to public communication and from mixed sex to same sex conversations framed by different cultural backgrounds Australian German Georgian Turkish US American Gender and Discourse in Politics, the Church and Organisations Clare Walsh, Clare Walsh Staff, 2001-12-01 The Sociolinguistics Reader Jenny Cheshire, Peter Trudgill, 1998 Gendered Discourse in the Professional Workplace Louise Mullany, 2007-07-12 Gendered Discourse in Professional Communication develops new theoretical and methodological approaches employing an interdisciplinary multi method approach which includes the introduction of a framework entitled critical feminist sociolinguistics The analysis focuses on linguistic practices used within corporate managerial interactions in conjunction with the gendered discourses that operate within these businesses The study highlights the crucial role that gendered discourses play in defining acceptable professional identities and explores the manner in which these discourses serve to maintain the glass ceiling Playing It Straight Mindy Blaise, 2012-11-12 In particular this book uses alternative theoretical perspectives to focus on how young children are doing gender in kindergarten classroom Rather than relying exclusively on biological and socialization theories of gender construction Blaise breaks down theoretical barriers with new understandings of how gender is socially and politically constructed by young children Gender Talk Susan A. Speer, 2005 This book presents a powerful case for the application of discursive psychology to feminism guiding the reader through cutting edge debates and providing valuable evidence of the benefits of discursive methodologies Communicating Gender in Context Helga Kotthoff, Ruth Wodak, 1997-01-01 The contributions to the book Communicating Gender in Context deal not only with grammatical gender but also with discursive procedures for constructing gender as a relevant social category in text and context Attention is directed to European cultures which till now have come up short in linguistic and discourse analytic gender studies e g Austria Spain Turkey Germany Poland and Sweden But also English speech communities and questions of English grammatical gender are dealt with In accordance with recent sociolinguistic research the contributors refrain from generalizing theses about how men and women normally speak no conversational style feature adheres so firmly to one sex as was thought in early feminism The studies however show that even today the feminine gender is often staged in a way that leads to situative asymmetry to the advantage of men The broader societal context of patriarchy does not determine all communicative encounters but demands particular efforts from women and men to be subverted Gender and Discourse on an Academic Internet Community Hendrika H. Beaulieu, 1995 Do men and women write differently and if so do these stylistic differences represent differing world views and or do they indicate divergent decisions that are made by the gendered individual with respect to the positioning inherent in the interactive communicative process In this thesis I consider how men and women write and interact as well as the topics of their conversations by examining the postings that characterize a specific semiotic Internet site Anthro L ubvm cc buffalo edu Created solely by and through language a net community is the ideal environment in which to conduct a field study which examines the use of gendered language In cyber public space where social interaction is largely stripped of bodily cues net participants rely on the power of discourse to convey the self I shall show that men and women make different choices as to how they will represent themselves in net public space and that these choices are conveyed through the preference of specific styles of writing Although conceptualizations of public space academic praxis and individual socialization all contribute to stylistic differentials I illustrate through my methodology that Gender is the master status that primarily informs communicative decisions Legitimate language in our culture is constructed on the rational paradigm which characterizes public institutions this paradigm is the fundamental principle which informs our system of male Language Posting acts on Anthro L offer evidence that those who do not speak or choose not to speak within the framework of this model are conceived as other<sup>1</sup> and are silenced through desertion by play and trivialization
