Astronomy at the Turn of the Twentieth Century in Chile and the United States Bárbara K. Silva, 2019-05-02 This Palgrave Pivot tells the transnational story of the astronomical observatory in the hills near Santiago Chile built in the early twentieth century through the efforts of astronomers from the Lick Observatory in California Venturing abroad to learn from largely unmapped Southern skies and hopefully answer lingering questions about the structure of the galaxy they planned a three year research expedition but ended up staying for more than twenty five years The history of the Mills Expedition offers a window onto the history of astronomy the challenges of scientific collaboration across national lines and the political and cultural contexts of early twentieth century Chile and the United States

Eye on the Sky Donald E. Osterbrock, John R. Gustafson, W.J. Shiloh Unruh, 2010-04-12 The world's first mountain top observatory and America's first big science research center Lick Observatory exemplifies astronomy's dramatic development in the past century. A dedicated Confederate naval officer and his jack-of-all-trades foreman used the bequest of a miserly California eccentric to transform an isolated mountain peak into the world's premier research observatory. Its first staff included a director from West Point and three of the outstanding astronomers of their time. Since its dedication in 1888 Lick Observatory has been the site of many of the most important discoveries in astronomy. Eye on the Sky presents Lick Observatory from the point of view of the people who breathed life into its giant telescopes. Their community was both constant and constantly transformed, shaped by workers famous and unknown who made it their home. The authors also explain in terms anyone can understand the laboratory advances that were adapted to telescopes to make them more powerful and the conceptual breakthroughs that discoveries at the telescope helped bring about. The men and women who went to the top of Mount Hamilton in search of greater knowledge of the skies helped to change our conception of the universe and our place in it. They were people with personal and political lives as well as scientific careers, and their story illuminates a time and a place where foundations were laid for the discoveries of the next century.

Biotic Borders Jeannie N. Shinozuka, 2022-04-20 A rich and eye-opening history of the mutual constitution of race and species in modern America. In the late nineteenth century, increasing traffic of transpacific plants, insects, and peoples raised fears of a biological yellow peril when nursery stock and other agricultural products shipped from Japan to meet the growing demand for exotics in the United States. Over the next fifty years, these crossings transformed conceptions of race and migration, played a central role in the establishment of the US empire and its government agencies, and shaped the fields of horticulture, invasion biology, entomology, and plant pathology. In Biotic Borders, Jeannie N. Shinozuka uncovers the emergence of biological nativism that fueled American imperialism and spurred anti-Asian racism that remains with us today. Shinozuka provides an eye-opening look at biotic exchanges that not only altered the lives of Japanese in America but transformed American society more broadly. She shows how the modern fixation on panic about foreign species created a linguistic and conceptual arsenal for anti-immigration movements that flourished in the early twentieth century. Xenophobia inspired concerns about biodiversity, prompting new categories of native and invasive species that defined groups as bio-invasions to be regulated or annihilated. By highlighting these connections, Shinozuka shows us that this story cannot be told about humans alone; the plants and animals that crossed with them were central to Japanese American and Asian American history. The rise of economic entomology and plant pathology in concert with public health and anti-immigration movements demonstrate these entangled histories of xenophobia, racism, and species invasions.
