Re/Structuring Science Education Wolff-Michael Roth,2009-12-24 Since its beginnings science education has been under the influence of psychological theories of knowing and learning while in more recent years social constructivist and sociological frameworks have also begun to emerge With little work being done on showing how the perspectives of these separate approaches might be integrated this work aims to plug the gap The book helps lay the groundwork for reuniting sociological and psychological perspectives on the knowing learning and teaching of science Featuring a range of integrative efforts beginning with simple conversation the chapters here include not only articles but also commentaries that engage with other papers as well as a useful running narrative that from the introduction to the epilogue contextualizes the book and its sections Specific attention is given to cultural historical activity theory which already offers an integration of psychological and cultural historical sociological perspectives on collectively motivated human activities A number of chapters as well as the contextualizing narrative explicitly use this theory as a framework for rethinking science education to achieve the reunification that is the goal of this work All the contributors to this volume have produced texts that contribute to the effort of overcoming the extant divide between sociological and psychological approaches to science education research and practice From very different positions gender culture race they provide valuable insights to reuniting approaches in both theory and method in the field As an ensemble the contributions constitute a rich menu of ideas from which new forms of science education can emerge
