

L'électricité

Parmi les objets qui nous entourent, beaucoup fonctionnent à l'électricité.

Il y a deux types d'objets électriques :

- Ceux qui fonctionnent avec une prise électrique comme un fer à repasser, une télévision, un ordinateur...
- Ceux qui fonctionnent avec des piles comme une lampe de poche, un pèse-personne, un talkie-walkie...

Cependant l'électricité est très dangereuse, elle peut tuer.

Il faut respecter des consignes de sécurité lorsqu'on utilise des appareils électriques.

L'ampoule électrique une ampoule électrique est un globe de verre qui contient filament. Son extrémité se termine par une partie métallique qui se compose d'un plot et d'un culot.

La pile électrique peu importe sa forme, la pile électrique possède de bornes notées - et +.

Pour qu'une ampoule brûle, son culot doit être en contact avec l'une des bornes de la pile et son plot doit toucher l'autre borne de la pile.

Conducteur ou isolant ?

Tous les matériaux ne conduisent pas l'électricité, on dit qu'ils sont isolants électriques.

En revanche les matériaux qui se laissent traverser par le courant électrique sont dits conducteurs comme le fer, l'aluminium, le cuivre.

Attention ! Pour que l'ampoule s'allume, tous les éléments du circuit doivent être conducteurs.
