Lectures on Ventilation Lewis W. Leeds,2015-07-21 Excerpt from Lectures on Ventilation Being a Course Delivered in the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia During the Winter of 1866 67 These Lectures were not originally written with any view to their publication but as they were afterwards requested for publication in the Journal of the Franklin Institute and there attracted very favorable notice I believed the rapidly increasing interest in the subject of ventilation would enable the publishers to sell a sufficient number to pay the expense of their publication and if so that this very spirit of inquiry which would lead to the perusal of even so small a work might be one step forward towards that much needed more general education on this important subject It was not my desire to give an elaborate treatise on the subject of ventilation I believed a few general principles illustrated in a familiar way would be much more likely to be read and I hoped would act as seed grain in commencing the growth of an inquiry which when once started in the right direction would soon discover the condition of the air we breathe to be of so much importance that the investigation would be eagerly pursued About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Shaw,2015-06-26 Excerpt from Air Currents and the Laws of Ventilation Lectures on the Physics of the Ventilation of Buildings Delivered in the University of Cambridge in the Lent Term 1903 Among the duties laid upon me by the tenure of a fellowship at my old College from 1900 till 1906 was the delivery each year of a short course of lectures before the University upon some subject connected with the Physics of the Atmosphere This little book represents my endeavour to discharge that duty in the year 1903 For many years I have taken a practical interest in the physical aspects of the general problem of ventilation When I was a member of the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate I tried to meet some complaints about the state of the air in the Biological Lecture Room by making use of the furnace draught of the boilers in a neighbouring stoke hole and communicated an account of the arrangement to the Philosophical Society The experiment was successful enough from the physical point of view but not from the biological for the stoker found that when it was working the furnace room became uncomfortably warm and any system of ventilation which disregards the comfort of the stoker has serious disadvantages to contend with The experiment however led to my undertaking the article on Ventilation and Warming for Stevenson and Murphy s Hygiene and that again to the inspection of the ventilation of Metropolitan Poor Law Schools for the Local Government Board Since then I have been appealed to for advice as regards ventilation from many directions About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Lectures on Ventilation Delivered in the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia During the Winter of 1866-67 Lewis W.
