Governance and Control of Financial Systems

Ms Gunilla Sundström, Professor Erik Hollnagel, 2012-10-01 The recent financial crisis has made it paramount for the financial services industry to find new perspectives to look at their industry and most importantly to gain a better understanding of how the global financial system can be made less vulnerable and more resilient The primary objective of this book is to illustrate how the safety science of Resilience Engineering can help to gain a better understanding of what the financial services system is and how to improve governance and control of financial services systems by leveraging some of its key concepts Resilience is the intrinsic ability of a system to adjust its functioning prior to during or following changes and disturbances so that it can sustain required operations under both expected and unexpected conditions This definition is focused on the ability to function rather than just to be impervious to failure and thereby bridges the traditional conflict between productivity and safety The core concept of the book is that the behaviour of the financial services system is the result of the tight couplings among the humans organizations and technologies that are necessary to provide complex financial functions such as the transfer of economic resources It is a consequence of this perspective that the risks associated with these systems cannot be understood without considering the nature of these tight couplings Adopting this perspective the book is designed to provide some answers to the following key questions about the financial crisis What actually happened Why and how did it happen Could something similar happen again How can we see that in time and how can we control it How can sustainable recovery of the global financial system be established How can its resilience be improved

It outlines key features of the systems and provides a set of guidelines for potential foreign investors as to how these systems compare with each other and with those in Canada and the United States and predict future developments including financial innovation and the internet. The study of financial frameworks focuses on corporate finance and analyzes the relationship between financing patterns and the level of development of securities markets and financial liberalization in the region. It focuses on the issue of how firms finance investments and the extent to which they depend on retained earnings and funding obtained through the market. Both studies include Japan, China, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore, Korea, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand, and Philippines. Both also consider the implications of taxation for savings and investment flows in domestic economies and across borders and the implications of public sector demand for savings for corporate financing constraints.
