

ANALYSIS AND INTERPRETATION OF FINANCIAL STATEMENTS 2

Ratio analysis - expresses the relationship among selected items of financial statement data. The relationship is expressed in terms of a percentage, a rate, or a simple proportion (Weygandt et al. 2013).

A financial ratio is composed of a numerator and a denominator. For example, a ratio that divides sales by assets will find the peso amount of sales generated by every peso of asset invested. This is an important ratio because it tells us the efficiency of invested asset to create revenue. This ratio is called asset turnover.

There are many ratios used in business. These ratios are generally grouped into three categories: (a) profitability, (b) efficiency, and (c) financial health.

❖ Sample Financial Statements to be used for the computations:
