Generating Failure Public Power Policy In The Northwest:

Generating Failure David L. Shapiro, 1989 The establishment of the Tennessee Valley Authority in 1933 ushered in a new age for American energy policy in which the federal government supplanted private industry as the primary provider of power for much of the nation In 1937 the Bonneville Power Administration was established in the Northwest with the mandate of transmitting and marketing power from the Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River Eventually BPA became responsible for all federal power facilities in the Northwest In this book economist David L Shapiro exposes the policy disasters caused by the public power system He shows that the Washington Public Power Supply System WPPS or Whoops default on 2.25 billion worth of municipal bonds the largest such default in America's history was due to reckless mismanagement by BPA He also demonstrates how political maneuvering continues to jeopardize the stability of the power industry Shapiro charges that BPA is a prime example of a federal agency that has grossly exceeded its initial charter and pursued an independent course at the expense of taxpayers and the constituents it was intended to serve His solution is to privatize the agency and restore the responsibility of energy provision in the Northwest and throughout the nation to the private sector Co published with the Cato Institute Forum for Applied Research and Public Policy, 1990 Transforming Power Aynsley Kellow, 1996 Originally published in 1996 this book is an exploration and analysis of the electricity industry in the context of uncertainty following the energy crisis of the 1970s and concern over the greenhouse effect Few industries demand a similar level of foresight and planning or such vast amounts of capital The book examines five well known Australian Canadian and New Zealand cases and closely analyses the ways in which various agencies have sought ends to serve the means at their disposal Electricity has long been regarded as a natural monopoly but questions of privatisation regulation and government control are increasingly prevalent The book explores these issues and also notes the experiences of other countries in its analysis of institutional reform Aynsley Kellow argues for different approaches to electricity planning which offer much by way of economic savings and minimisation of environmental problems Reorganization of the Department of Energy United States.
