A. Mooney,M. Godron,2012-12-06 The earth s landscapes are being increasingly impacted by the activities of man Unfortunately we do not have a full understanding of the consequences of these disturbances on the earth s productive capacity This problem was addressed by a group of French and U S ecologists who are specialists at levels of integration extending from genetics to the biosphere at a meeting at Stanford California sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique With a few important exceptions it was found at this meeting that most man induced disturbances of ecosystems can be viewed as large scale patterns of disturbances that have occurred generally on a small scale in ecosystems through evolutionary time Man has induced dramatic large scale changes in the environment which must be viewed at the biosphere level Acid deposition and CO increase are two 2 examples of the consequences of man s increased utilization of fossil fuels It is a matter of considerable concern that we cannot yet fully predict the ecological consequences of these environmental changes Such problems must be addressed at the international level yet substantive mechanisms to do this are not available General Technical Report INT. ,1981 USDA Forest Service General Technical Report INT. ,1980 Proceedings of the International Symposium on Remote Sensing of Environment ,1978 Symposium Proceedings: Pathways and cycling ,1975 General Technical Report NE ,1980 Bibliography of Agriculture ,1974 A Guide for Revegetating Coal Minesoils in the Eastern United States Willis Gene Vogel,1981 EPA-600/7 ,1979
