Forages and grazing in horse nutrition Markku Saastamoinen, Maria João Fradinho, Ana Sofia Santos, Nicoletta Miraglia, 2012-08-17 Forages should be the basis of all diets in horse feeding Therefore it is of major importance to determine which parameters will influence their quality Changes in chemical composition along the vegetative cycle nutrient losses during harvesting preservation and storage are factors that could have an effect on nutritive value as well on digestibility and palatability A specific grazing and ingesting behaviour linked to plant preferences and the selection of feeding sites will have an impact on biodiversity This will determine the options on plant species and varieties and further management of pastures for horses This book highlights the role of forages and grazing in horse nutrition and also gathers information about related topics such as the contribution of local breeds for the sustainability and development of rural areas their impact on landscape and relationships with environmental preservation This book is the 6th volume in a scientific series conceived through the European Workshop on Equine Nutrition EWEN which falls under the umbrella of the Horse Commission of the European Federation of Animal Science EAAP All these materials provide an interesting basis for further discussion not only in specialized forums but also for those involved in horse production

Using Science to Improve the BLM Wild Horse and Burro Program National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Agriculture and Natural Resources, Committee to Review the Bureau of Land Management Wild Horse and Burro Management Program, 2013-10-04 Using Science to Improve the BLM Wild Horse and Burro Program A Way Forward reviews the science that underpins the Bureau of Land Management's oversight of free ranging horses and burros on federal public lands in the western United States concluding that constructive changes could be implemented The Wild Horse and Burro Program has not used scientifically rigorous methods to estimate the population sizes of horses and burros to model the effects of management actions on the animals or to assess the availability and use of forage on rangelands Evidence suggests that horse populations are growing by 15 to 20 percent each year a level that is unsustainable for maintaining healthy horse populations as well as healthy ecosystems Promising fertility control methods are available to help limit this population growth however In addition science based methods exist for improving population estimates predicting the effects of management practices in order to maintain genetically diverse healthy populations and estimating the productivity of rangelands Greater transparency in how science based methods are used to inform management decisions may help increase public confidence in the Wild Horse and Burro Program
