Hernández-Luna,Maurizio Sanguinetti,2025-07-31 Bacteria host interactions represent a critical area of research particularly in the context of infection and carcinogenesis Microorganisms such as viruses and bacteria have long been implicated in the development of cancers with notable examples including human papillomavirus HPV in cervical cancer and Helicobacter pylori in gastric cancer Recent studies have expanded this understanding to include a broader range of bacteria both pathogenic and commensal in the carcinogenic process This has sparked significant interest in the role of bacteria in the onset and progression of various neoplasms While much of the research has concentrated on gastrointestinal cancers where dysbiosis and bacterial infections are suspected contributors emerging evidence suggests that bacteria also colonize tumor tissues in organs such as the breast prostate and lung Despite these findings the precise mechanisms by which bacteria influence tumor biology remain poorly understood highlighting the need for further investigation This research topic aims to describe the complex interactions between bacteria and host tissues that contribute to carcinogenesis Specifically it seeks to identify and characterize pathogenic bacteria associated with cancer understand the role of bacterial toxins in carcinogenic activity and explore the impact of dysbiosis in gastrointestinal neoplasms Additionally the research will investigate bacterial colonization in various tumor tissues and the resulting immunological alterations due to bacteria tumor interactions By addressing these questions the research aims to fill critical gaps in our understanding and potentially uncover new avenues for cancer prevention and treatment To gather further insights into the intricate dynamics of bacteria host interactions in carcinogenesis we welcome articles addressing but not limited to the following themes Pathogenic bacteria associated with carcinogenesis Bacterial toxins with carcinogenic activity Dysbiosis in neoplasms of the gastrointestinal tract Bacterial colonization in tumor tissue Immunological alterations due to bacteria tumor tissue interaction In a Sea of Bitterness

R. Keith Schoppa, 2011-11-30 The Japanese invasion of Shanghai in 1937 led some thirty million Chinese to flee their homes in terror and live in the words of artist and writer Feng Zikai in a sea of bitterness as refugees Keith Schoppa paints a comprehensive picture of the refugee experience in one province Zhejiang on the central Chinese coast where the Japanese launched major early offensives as well as notorious later campaigns He recounts stories of both heroes and villains of choices poorly made amid war's bewildering violence of risks bravely taken despite an almost palpable quaking fear As they traveled south into China's interior refugees stepped backward in time sometimes as far as the nineteenth century their journeys revealing the superficiality of China's modernization Memoirs and oral histories allow Schoppa to follow the footsteps of the young and old elite and non elite as they fled through unfamiliar terrain and coped with unimaginable physical and psychological difficulties Within the context of Chinese culture being forced to leave home was profoundly threatening to one's sense of identity Not just people but whole institutions also fled from Japanese occupation and Schoppa considers schools governments and businesses as refugees with narratives of their own Local governments responded variously to Japanese attacks from enacting scorched earth policies to offering rewards for the capture of plague infected rats in the aftermath of germ warfare While at times these official procedures improved the situation for refugees more often as Schoppa describes in moving detail they only deepened the tragedy

Dai, Samantha Chandranath Karunarathna, Nakin Suwannarach, 2023-08-16 Articulating Citizenship Robert Culp, 2020-03-23 At the genesis of the Republic of China in 1912 many political leaders educators and social reformers argued that republican education should transform China's people into dynamic modern citizens social and political agents whose public actions would rescue the national community Over subsequent decades however they came to argue fiercely over the contents of citizenship and how it should be taught Moreover many of their carefully crafted policies and programs came to be transformed by textbook authors teachers administrators and students Furthermore the idea of citizenship once introduced raised many troubling questions Who belonged to the national community in China and how was the nation constituted What were the best modes of political action How should modern people take responsibility for public matters What morality was proper for the modern public This book reconstructs civic education and citizenship training in secondary schools in the lower Yangzi region during the Republican era It also analyzes how students used the tools of civic education introduced in their schools to make themselves into young citizens and explores the complex social and political effects of educated youths' civic action

De Facto Federalism in China

Yongnian Zheng, 2007 This book is the first attempt to conceptualize China's central local relations from the behavioral perspective Although China does not have a federalist system of government the author believes that with deepening reform and openness China's central local relations is increasingly functioning on federalist principles Federalism as a functioning system in China is under studied The author defines the political system existing in China as OC de facto federalism and provides a detailed analysis of its sources and dynamics in the book The system is mainly driven by two related factors OCo inter governmental decentralization and globalization While economic decentralization since the 1980s has led to the formation of de facto federalism globalization since the 1990s has accelerated this process and generated increasingly high pressure on the Chinese leadership to institutionalize de facto federalism by various measures of selective recentralization Molecular Environmental Soil hormonal therapy have been used in clinical practice to treat cancer patients However these methods are either not completely tumor free or without collateral damage to health tissues Therefore tumor recurrence partial remission treatment side effect and poor tolerance in elderly patients and lack of effective strategy to treat late stage cancers have been the major hurdles faced by clinicians in health care Although cancer immunotherapy including checkpoint blockade CAR T oncolytic viruses and recombinant cytokines has taken center stage in mainstream oncology because of its specifically targeting tumor cells without affecting surrounding normal cells only a proportion of patients receiving treatment respond and others relapse after an initial response Different tumor indications respond differently and even in cancer types that respond unresponsiveness are still observed This resistance suggests that either lack of sufficient host recognition and immunity intrinsic or active immune suppression by tumor complex acquired
