Although occasionally there may be certain imperfections with these old texts, we feel they deserve to be made available for future generations to enjoy.      Left Tackle Thayer (Classic Reprint) Ralph Henry Barbour, 2018-01-20 Excerpt from Left Tackle Thayer: A boy in a blue serge suit sat on the second tier of seats of an otherwise empty grand stand and with his straw hat pulled well over his eyes watched the progress of a horse drawn mower about a field. The horse was a big well fed chest nut and as he walked slowly along he bobbed his head rhythmically. In the seat of the mower perched a thin little man in a pair of blue overalls and a shirt which had also been blue at one time but which was now faded almost white. A broad brimmed straw hat of the sort affected by farmers protected his head from the noonday sun. Between the overalls and the rusty brogans on his feet several inches of bare ankle intervened and as he paraded slowly around the field almost the only sign of life he showed was when he occasionally stooped to brush a mosquito from these exposed portions of his anatomy. The horse too wore brogans, big round leather shoes which strapped over his hoofs and protected the turf.
