Zvi Lerman

The rush to privatize farming in Ukraine has ground to a halt. Ukrainian agriculture remains predominantly collective, and the switch to private farming has slowed considerably. Unless the government steps in soon, land reform in Ukraine will be in danger of stagnating.

Land reform in Ukraine was launched in March 1991, while the country was still part of the Soviet Union, by a resolution of the Ukrainian Supreme Soviet. This date marks the beginning of the attempt to transform Ukraine's agriculture and food sector into a more efficient and productive system based on market principles and private ownership.¹ In addition to land reform and restructuring of traditional collective and state farms, the sectoral reform agenda includes liberalization of the market environment, privatization of agroprocessing and trade, and the creation of a new institutional framework for agriculture.

This article focuses primarily on land reform and farm restructuring as one of the major components of the reform process in Ukraine. To summarize the achievements of land reform during the first five years, 1991–96, the World Bank and the Ukrainian Agrarian Institute, in January–March 1996, conducted a survey of some 2,000 respondents, including private farmers, managers of large farm enterprises, and employees on large farms in eleven of the country's twenty-five provinces. It was the second farm-level survey supported by the World Bank in Ukraine, continuing and extending fieldwork done between November 1993 and March 1994.² The objective of the study was to conduct an empirical and analytical assessment of changes in land ownership and farming structures, and to evaluate the effect of restructuring on large-scale farms from independence through the spring of 1996.

Legal Framework for Land Reform

The state's monopoly on land ownership, which had been a feature of the Soviet system since 1917, was eliminated by the January 1992 Law on Forms of Land Own-

Restructuring has produced a definite favorable impact on labor relations and workers behavior in the reorganized farms Managers of reorganized farm enterprises give a much more positive assessment of the behavioral patterns of their workers than managers of non reorganized farms Agriculture remains the main source of employment and livelihood for the large rural population of many transition countries especially among the former Soviet republics Accordingly the World Bank continuously monitors the progress of land reform and farm restructuring in the region because of the potential impact of these processes on rural development and poverty alleviation in rural areas The present study on Ukraine is the latest addition to a long and growing series of World Bank publications on land reform and farm restructuring in the former socialist countries of Europe and Central Asia The unique feature of all these publications is their reliance on first hand empirical information collected through extensive farm surveys of various rural constituencies Farm surveys have been conducted by the World Bank in many countries of the CIS Russia Ukraine Moldova Armenia Georgia Turkmenistan Belarus and Central and Eastern Europe Poland Romania Bulgaria Hungary Albania Analysis of survey findings enables the World Bank to base its policy dialogue with governments in the region on solid empirical facts making the Bank's recommendation much more credible and relevant The new findings for Ukraine will similarly provide a platform for useful policy discussions with this country's government and supply the many international donors active on the local scene with essential information for the design of their strategic programs Land Policies and Evolving Farm Structures in Transition Countries Zvi Lerman, Csaba Csáki, Gershon Feder, 2002 Land Reform in the Former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe Stephen K. Agricultural reforms including privatization of land and farm restructuring are an important cornerstone for overall transformation of the economies of the former socialist world This paper summarizes the current status of land reform in

Moldova and shows how there has been clear progress in creating a market based agriculture and food sector in Moldova. The results of this study indicate that genuine restructuring and transition to full fledged private farming have resulted in improved profitability and higher incomes for private farmers than those achieved by traditional collectives. This study presents the results of the multi country study for farm debt in five Commonwealth of Independent States CIS countries Belarus Kazakhstan Moldova Russia and the Ukraine. Agriculture in Transition Zvi Lerman, Csaba Csáki, Gershon Feder, 2004-01-01. In Agriculture in Transition: Land Policies and Evolving Farm Structures in Post Soviet Countries authors Zvi Lerman, Csaba Csáki and Gershon Feder study the land policies and farming structures of these newly emerging nations as components of institutional change in the rural sector. Change from a centralized rural economy to a market oriented economy. Ukraine, 1994-01-01. Annotation: The dissolution of the Soviet Union and the breakdown of all previously established production and trading practices has forced Ukraine to confront the demands imposed by a market based economy. The food and agriculture sector is still in the early stages of the transition toward private ownership and market based decisionmaking. The adjustment is difficult because of the country's long history of distorted prices, government intervention and monopolistic marketing and because of the built in inefficiencies of the collective and state farm systems. This report describes the current status of the food and agriculture system and the continuing process of transformation. It also provides an agenda and recommendations for maintaining the reform process. The main chapters highlight the development of a market framework and competitive strategies, land reform and privatization and ways of improving farm production and efficiency. What has been achieved in rural finance and institutional reform during more than a decade of transition and what challenges remain? What are the special needs of South Eastern European countries to attract agricultural credit and finance to? Building Market Institutions in Post-communist Agriculture David A. J. Macey, William Pyle, Stephen K. Wegren, 2004-01-01. Eurasia emerged from the former Soviet states failed agrarian program poised to be a great power in the new global economy. In the late 1980s post communist states put forth an agrarian reform plan that promised whirlwind institutional change as its goal. However these amendments did not unleash the efficiency and productivity that privatization and destatizing seemed to promise. Editors David Macey, William Pyle and Stephen Wegren along with a host of world leading agrarian analyst and practitioners discuss the shortcoming of post communist agrarian reform and reveal how and why particular policies were or were not adopted. Building Market Institutions in Post Communist Agriculture draws on country level case studies to analyze various initiatives undertaken by agricultural economies. Contributors use a comparative analytical framework to shed light on the complex universal processes of agrarian transformation that continue to change the social economic and political character of the former Soviet Union

Setsuya Satō, David B. Humphrey, 1995-01-01 Emphasizes the importance of designing a well functioning intergovernmental fiscal system for achieving the reform objectives of economies in transition This study explores the issues involved in redesigning intergovernmental relations in Albania Bulgaria Hungary Poland Romania the Russian Federation and Ukraine where extensive political and fiscal decentralization is now underway The volume focuses on the elements of decentralization in the transitional economies that distinguish them from those in the rest of the world The book shows that in the transition from a command to a market economy designing a well functioning intergovernmental fiscal system is a prerequisite for achieving other reform objectives macroeconomic stability private sector development and a social safety net for those hurt by the transition The study further demonstrates that a broader analytical framework than is conventionally involved in the study of intergovernmental finance is needed for analyzing fiscal issues in these economies

Ukraine at the Crossroads

Axel Siedenberg, Lutz Hoffmann, 2012-12-06 Axel Siedenberg Lutz Hoffmann 1 The specificity of transformation in Ukraine When the Soviet empire collapsed in the very early 1990s the new era that dawned was commonly given the name transformation implying the systemic change from socialism towards some form of market economy Almost ten years later the transformation process does not exist any more instead a whole variety of transformations are taking place in Eastern Europe and the CIS Whereas some countries are heading towards EU membership e g Poland others are still pondering on what economic system to adopt e g Russia and yet others have rejected a market oriented transformation outright e g Belarus Within this variety of transformations Ukraine clearly stands out as a specific case Whilst initially considered to be one of the stronger post Soviet Republics it descended into economic depression in 1992 and has hardly recovered since on the other hand once considered to be a potential centre of ethnic unrest and political instability it has turned into a democratic peaceful civil society that is firmly establishing itself within the new European and world order This book takes a critical look at economic reform in Ukraine as compared to other East European and CIS countries Our hypothesis is that Ukraine is going through a transformation process peculiar to itself which can be traced at both macroeconomic and microeconomic level

The Bangladesh Rural Advancement Committee's Credit Programs Shahidur R. Khandker, M. A. Baqui Khalily, 1996 Spanish edition Pobreza Desigualdad y Formaci3 n del Capital Humano en Am rica Latina 1950 2025 Latin America is marked by wide inequality in income and entrenched poverty This paper argues that the main reason these conditions persist is the lack of adequate education for new generations The author cites several factors economic growth and structural transformation of the economy the convergence of regional per capita income and the diminishing rates of return on education that have combined to lower the region s areas of inequality To bring the region quickly out of poverty the report recommends that universal basic education be given to all young people in the next two decades See also the English edition Stock No 13630 ISBN 0 8213 3630 4

Cooperation in the Romanian Countryside Rachel Sabates-Wheeler, 2005-01-01 The collapse of communism in Romania held the promise of a revival of private small scale farming It was expected that collectivized agricultural producers would quickly return to private farming which was thought to be more desirable in terms of economic efficiency Overall however the Romanian transition experience has not fulfilled these expectations the agricultural sector has become stagnant and cooperative farms have remained remarkably persistent throughout the southern region Cooperation in the Romanian Countryside explores the apparent conundrum in farmer behavior in the context of market transition asking why farmers are continuing to join cooperative forms of farming against all probably theories and what efficiency might in fact be gained from these cooperative endeavors Using a combination of qualitative and quantitative methods Rachel Sabates Wheeler deftly analyzes how participation in different farm forms helps or hinders landowners as they attempt to adapt in newly privatized markets This book is of essential importance to agricultural economists and rural development specialists especially in transitional countries Policy Research Working Papers ,1991
