Stringer,2006-10-30 History has often confirmed that it is not superior weapons but superior organizations that are the most effective factor in achieving military success In light of this consideration Kevin D Stringer s new work proposes how the U S military can best be restructured to conduct military operations other than war as they are known in doctrinal terms Such reform is central to meeting the demands of homeland defense and smaller scale contingencies including nation building and stability operations Foreign military formations present models for peace operations irregular warfare and other missions as well as counterterrorism law enforcement and border control The models considered drawn from tactical units in Britain Denmark Germany Israel Norway Rhodesia Russia and Switzerland are selected as best practice examples for transforming the U S Armed Forces for future missions both at home and abroad The author describes the categories of military operations other than war in the context of force structure requirements for homeland defense and irregular warfare Each chapter aligns foreign tactical organizations with these military operations to identify appropriate formations to enhance the U S Army This issue of future organizational structure is crucial to the debate over the Quadrennial Defense Review the Pentagon report to Congress on emerging threats and the future role of the National Guard Changes in existing force structure will have significant implications for the conduct of stabilization operations in Iraq and Afghanistan as well as responses by the active and Reserve components to domestic emergencies
