

Comparative Analysis of Architectural-Construction Terms and Related Dictionaries

Foreign Languages Department, Senior lecturer

Abstract: The true essence or value of anything-phenomenon is evident by comparing it with another. Accordingly, the linguistic features of architectural-construction terms, which are considered a specific component of the terminological system, are also clarified when compared. Language, a social phenomenon and a living means of communication, is perfecting and becoming more complex every second. As a result of the development of science and technology and other factors, the continuous introduction and assimilation of new field terminology has led field experts, lexicographers and terminographers to organize the terminology of architecture and construction, to define system-structural, semantic and lexical boundaries, to define unity as a term within the limits of internal possibilities, sets a number of tasks such as nationalization.

Keywords: terms, semantic and lexical boundaries, specific component, vocabulary

The main purpose of architecture is to create better living conditions for mankind. The term "architecture" not only represents today's architectural image, but is also used in the sense of preserving the image of historical creativity, which is a part of culture. Studying the term architecture as a whole concept reveals more clearly the linguistic differences between the terms architecture and construction. Architecture should be understood more as architectural design and refinement, and under the term construction should be understood the conceptual arts of construction. It is possible to review construction terminology and select architectural terms from among them. Based on the architectural materials, we can mention the following groups: building types, building structure, building parts, basic construction concept, engineering maintenance of the building. We can continue these classifications as long as we like. But it is clear that creating a glossary of architectural construction terms requires an analysis of each term. 90% of architectural terms are usually formed from modern terms. In the formation of construction terminology, glossaries related to construction, which are in general use, serve as a basis.

Unlike other field terms, construction-architecture terms develop in parallel with construction processes. It is the coverage of architectural terms of a certain period that allows us to draw certain conclusions about the development of construction in that language or period. The following classification groups should be taken into account when creating a dictionary of construction terms. Including:

- Terms used by production organizations and technology industry in construction;
- Terms used in the design of building structure and its functional types;
- Term groups that are hierarchically related to building terms;
- Conceptual category terms related to specific branches of the construction industry.
