Reinventing the Curriculum Mark Priestley, Gert Biesta, 2013-06-20 Scotland s Curriculum for Excellence offers an example of a different approach to national curriculum development It combines what are claimed to be the best features of top down and bottom up approaches to curriculum development and provides an indication of the broad qualities that school education should promote rather than a detailed description of curriculum content Advocates of the approach argue that it provides central guidance for schools and maintains national standards whilst at the same time allowing schools and teachers the flexibility to take account of local needs when designing programmes of education Reinventing the Curriculum uses Scotland s Curriculum for Excellence as a rich case study analysing the strengths and weaknesses of this approach to curriculum design and development and exploring the implications for curriculum planning and development around the world Transforming Training David Mackey, Sian Livsey, 2006-02-03 This book is about the provision of workplace learning in times of significant change and about employing learning as a critical weapon in the fight for an organisation's success. The authors scope out their vision of the trainer as a learning architect whose role is to create an organisation-wide structure for learning. Within this structure, the range of professionals now responsible for training trainers: departmental managers, training consultants, coaches and mentors, as well as line managers, will be encouraged to choose from a variety of different learning opportunities, including in-house training, individual coaching or external courses, to create a flexible learning environment. The book explores the strategic arguments necessary to implement a learning architecture, the competencies and responsibilities required of the learning architect to create this environment, and the practical opportunities available to those carrying out the programmes within the organisation.

Strategic Management of Universities in the Ibero-America Region Jairo H. Cifuentes-Madrid, Pablo Landoni Couture, Xavier Llinàs-Audet, 2015-03-02. This book provides the readers with a map of the higher education systems and strategic management trends in the higher education institutions within countries of the Ibero-America region. The key feature of this volume is the presentation of a conceptual framework as a point of reference for the development of university management systems in a specific context. Furthermore, the book provides an overview of the development of higher education in Latin America and the Caribbean to advance understanding of the changes observed in the institutional strategic management setting. The book examines and compares the types of strategic management processes used, as well as the models of applicability of strategy making. This analysis is done by cutting through a critical review of the processes and systems of university management used in the various analysed countries and pays special attention to the actors involved, the processes, the reporting systems, the expectations, and the limitations. Additionally, the book introduces a methodology for the identification and implementation of best practice in university strategic management and presents practical suggestions about the ways in which processes and models can be used to increase quality and competitive advantage.
