Displaying Women Maureen E. Montgomery, 2016-04-29 Displaying Women explores the role of women in the representation of leisure in turn of the century New York To see and be seen on Fifth Avenue and Broadway in Central Park and in the fashionable uptown hotels and restaurants was one of the fundamental principles in the display aesthetic of New York's fashionable society Maureen E Montgomery argues for a reconsideration of the role of women in the bourgeois elite in turn of the century America By contrasting multiple images of women drawn from newspapers magazines private correspondence etiquette manuals and the New York fiction of Edith Wharton Henry James and others she offers a convincing antidote to the long standing tendency in women's history to overlook women whose class affiliations have put them in a position of power

The Private World of High Society Lucy Kavalier, 1960 Spy, 1990-06 Smart Funny Fearless It's pretty safe to say that Spy was the most influential magazine of the 1980s It might have remade New York's cultural landscape it definitely changed the whole tone of magazine journalism It was cruel brilliant beautifully written and perfectly designed and feared by all There's no magazine I know of that's so continually referenced held up as a benchmark and whose demise is so lamented Dave Eggers It's a piece of garbage Donald Trump

In The Company Of Black Men Craig Steven Wilder, 2001 Traces the development of African American community traditions over three centuries From the subaltern assemblies of the enslaved in colonial New York City to the benevolent New York African Society of the early national era to the formation of the African Blood Brotherhood in twentieth century Harlem voluntary associations have been a fixture of African American communities In the Company of Black Men examines New York City over three centuries to show that enslaved Africans provided the institutional foundation upon which African American religious political and social culture could flourish Arguing that the universality of the voluntary tradition in African American communities has its basis in collectivism a behavioral and rhetorical tendency to privilege the group over the individual it explores the institutions that arose as enslaved Africans exploited the potential for group action and mass resistance Craig Steven Wilder's research is particularly exciting in its assertion that Africans entered the Americas equipped with intellectual traditions and sociological models that facilitated a communitarian response to oppression Presenting a dramatic shift from previous work which has viewed African American male associations as derivative and imitative of white male counterparts In the Company of Black Men provides a ground breaking template for investigating antebellum black institutions

The National Habitus Marie-Pierre Le Hir, 2014-08-27 Stories about border crossers illegal aliens refugees that regularly appear in the press everywhere point to the crucial role national identity plays in human beings' lives today. The National Habitus seeks to understand how and why national belonging became so central to a person's identity and sense of identity. Centered on the acquisition of the national habitus, the process that transforms subjects into citizens when a state becomes a nation-state, the book examines this transformation at the individual level in the case of nineteenth-century France. Literary texts serve as primary material in this study of national belonging because, as Germaine de Staël pointed out long ago, literature has the unique ability to provide access to inner feelings. The term habitus in the title of this book signals a departure from traditional approaches to nationalism, a break with the criteria of language, race, and ethnicity typically used to examine it. It is grounded instead in a sociology that deals with the subjective dimension of life and is best exemplified by the works of Norbert Elias (1897-1990) and Pierre Bourdieu (1931-2002), two sociologists who approach belief systems like nationalism from a historical instead of an ethical vantage point. By distinguishing between two groups of major French writers, three who experienced the 1789 Revolution firsthand as adults (Olympe de Gouges, François-René de Chateaubriand, and Germaine de Staël) and three who did not (Stendhal, Prosper Mérimée, and George Sand), the book captures evolving understandings of the nation as well as thoughts and emotions associated with national belonging over time. Le Hir shows that although none of these writers is typically associated with nationalism, all of them were actually affected by the process of nationalization of feelings, thoughts, and habits, irrespective of aesthetic preferences, social class, or political views. By the end of the nineteenth century, they had learned to feel and view themselves as French nationals; they all exhibited the characteristic features of the national habitus: love of their own nation, distrust and/or hatred of other nations. By underscoring the dual, contradictory nature of the national habitus, the book highlights the limitations nation-based identities impose on the prospect for peace.
