Literacy, Home and School Peter Hannon,2013-10-14 Parental involvement in the teaching of reading and writing has often lagged behind practice though schools in many countries now recognise the importance of parental involvement The ideas presented in this book offer new ways of thinking about parental involvement and should interest both researchers and practitioners It relates the recent growth of involvement to broader considerations of the nature of literacy and historical exclusion of parents from the curriculum Descriptions are given of key findings from research into pre school literacy work with parents and parents hearing children read and a framework to underpin practice is offered The author gives a critique of evaluation methods in the field and suggests how parental involvement should be evaluated together with a view of research findings to date and issues needing further study The book concludes with an appraisal of what was learned from research and what needs further enquiry

Non-professional Interpreting and Translation Rachele Antonini,Letizia Cirillo,Linda Rossato,Ira Torresi,2017-06-15 In the light of recent waves of mass immigration non professional interpreting and translation NPIT is spreading at an unprecedented pace While as recently as the late 20th century much of the field was a largely uncharted territory the current proportions of NPIT suggest that the phenomenon is here to stay and needs to be studied with all due academic rigour This collection of essays is the first systematic attempt at looking at NPIT in a scholarly and at the same time pragmatic way Offering multiple methods and perspectives and covering the diverse contexts in which NPIT takes place the volume is a welcome turn in an all too often polarized debate in both academic and practitioner circles Parents and Schools William W. Cutler, 2000-06-15 Who holds ultimate authority for the education of America's children teachers or parents Although the relationship between home and school has changed dramatically over the decades William Cutler's fascinating history argues that it has always been a political one and his book uncovers for the first time how and why the balance of power has shifted over time Starting with parental dominance in the mid nineteenth century Cutler chronicles how schools growing bureaucratization and professionalization allowed educators to gain increasing control over the schooling and lives of the children they taught Central to his story is the role of parent teacher associations which helped transform an adversarial relationship into a collaborative one Yet parents have also been controlled by educators through PTAs leading to the perception that they are company unions Cutler shows how in the 1920s and 1930s schools expanded their responsibility for children's well being outside the classroom These efforts sowed the seeds for later conflict as schools came to be held accountable for solving society's problems Finally he brings the reader into recent decades in which a breakdown of trust racial tension and parents rights have taken the story full circle with parents and schools once again at odds Cutler's book is an invaluable guide to understanding how parent teacher cooperation which is essential for our children's educational success might be achieved Literacy, Home and School Peter Hannon University of Sheffield., 2013-10-14 Parental involvement in the teaching of reading and writing has often lagged behind practice though schools in many countries now recognise the importance of parental involvement The ideas presented in this book offer new ways of thinking about parental involvement and should interest both researchers and practitioners It relates the recent growth of involvement to broader considerations of the nature of literacy and historical exclusion of parents from the curriculum Descriptions are given of key findings from research into pre school literacy work with parents and parents hearing children read and a framework to underpin practice is offered The author gives a critique of evaluation methods in the field and suggests how parental involvement should be evaluated together with a view of research findings to date and issues needing further study The book concludes with an appraisal of what was learned from research and what needs further enquiry School and Home Education, 1912 Exceptional Children William L.
