Molecular Mechanisms for Sensory Signals Edward M. Kosower, 2017-03-14 Pursuing the questions of how we learn and how memory is made Edward Kosower introduces a novel and rich approach to connecting molecular properties with the biological properties that enable us to write and read to create culture and ethics and to think Here he examines what happens within a single cell in reaction to external stimuli and shows the parallels between single cell and multicellular responses To address the problem of learning Kosower explains the molecular mechanisms of responses to input from taste olfactory and visual receptors He then shows how these and other processes serve as the basis for memory This study covers such signals for the molecular process of learning as pheromones the molecular signals mediating behavior light activates the G protein receptor rhodopsin and acetylcholine opens the nicotinic acetylcholine receptor Kosower's discussion of the structure and function of these complex molecules has direct implications for such areas as molecular neurobiology bioorganic chemistry and drug design in elucidating approaches to the structure of drug targets Originally published in 1991 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press
