Grand Canyon The Hidden Secrets Large Format:

Virtual Voyages Jeffrey Ruoff, 2006-01-24 Virtual Voyages illuminates the pivotal role of travelogues within the history of cinema. The travelogue dominated the early cinema period from 1895 to 1905, was central to the consolidation of documentary in the 1910s and 1920s, proliferated in the postwar era of 16mm distribution and today continues to flourish in IMAX theaters and a host of non-theatrical venues. It is not only the first chapter in the history of documentary but also a key element of ethnographic film, home movies and fiction films. In this collection, leading film scholars trace the intersection of technology and ideology in representations of travel across a wide variety of cinematic forms. In so doing, they demonstrate how attention to the role of travel imagery in film blurs distinctions between genres and heightens awareness of cinema as a technology for moving through space and time, of cinema itself as a mode of travel. Some contributors take a broad view of travelogues by examining the colonial and imperial perspectives embodied in early travel films, the sensation of movement that those films evoked and the role of live presentations such as lectures in our understanding of travelogues. Other essays are focused on specific films, figures and technologies, including early travelogues encouraging Americans to move to the West, the making and reception of the documentary Grass (1925), shot on location in Turkey, Syria, Iraq and Iran, the role of travel imagery in 1930s Hollywood cinema, the late twentieth-century 16mm illustrated lecture industry and the panoramic possibilities presented by IMAX technologies. Together, the essays provide a nuanced appreciation of how, through their representations of travel, filmmakers actively produce the worlds they depict. Contributors: Rick Altman, Paula Amad, Dana Benelli, Peter J. Bloom, Alison Griffiths, Tom Gunning, Hamid Naficy, Jennifer Lynn Peterson, Lauren Rabinovitz, Jeffrey Ruoff, Alexandra Schneider, Amy J. Staples. Culture, Technology, and the Creation of America's National Parks Richard A. Grusin, 2004-04-22 Richard Grusin's innovative study investigates how the establishment of national parks participated in the production of American national identity after the Civil War. The creation of America's national parks is usually seen as an uncomplicated act of environmental preservation. Grusin argues instead that parks must be understood as complex cultural technologies for the reproduction of nature as landscape art. He explores the origins of America's three major parks, Yosemite, Yellowstone and Grand Canyon, in relation to other forms of landscape representation, including photography, mapping, travel writing and fiction. A History of Three-Dimensional Cinema David A. Cook, 2021-09-14 A History of Three-Dimensional Cinema chronicles 3-D cinema as a single continuous and coherent medium, proceeding from 19th-century experiments in stereoscopic photography and lantern projection (1839-1892) to stereoscopic cinema's long novelty period (1893-1952). It proceeds to examine the first Hollywood boom in anaglyphic stereo (1953-1955), when the mainstream industry produced 69 features in 3-D, mostly action films that could exploit the depth illusion, but also a handful of big-budget films, for example Kiss Me Kate (George Sidney, 1953) and Dial M for Murder (Alfred Hitchcock, 1954). Until audiences tired of the process, the anaglyphic revival of 1970-1985, when 3-D was sustained as a novelty feature in sensational genres like soft-core pornography.
