This timely volume is directed to an audience of students and practitioners of special education, recreational and occupational therapy, and pediatric nursing. It clearly describes how behavioral training methods may be applied to the play problems of the mentally retarded, provides specific instructional directions and an empirical rationale for program guidelines, and addresses the leisure time needs of all ages and functioning levels of the mentally retarded. In short, it will effectively instruct those involved with the mentally retarded in how to help them acquire previously missing play skills.

Helping the Mentally Retarded Acquire Play Skills Paul Wehman, 1977      Handbook of Behavior Modification with the Mentally Retarded J. L. Matson, 2013-03-14 Mental retardation has probably existed for as long as mankind has inhabited the earth. References to seemingly retarded persons appear in Greek and Roman literature. Examination of Egyptian mummies suggests that some may have suffered from diseases associated with mental retardation. Mohammed advocated feeding and housing those without reason. There is other evidence for favorable attitudes toward the retarded in early history but attitudes varied from age to age and from country to country. The concept of remediation did not emerge until the nineteenth century. Earlier in 1798 Itard published an account of his attempt to train the wild boy of Aveyron. A rash of efforts to habilitate retarded persons followed. Training schools were developed in Europe and the United States in the 1800s; however, these early schools did not fulfill their promise and by the end of the nineteenth century large inhumane warehouses for retarded persons existed. The notion of habilitation through training had largely been abandoned and was not to reappear until after World War II.

Autism in Adolescents and Adults Eric Schopler, Gary B. Mesibov, 2013-06-29 The state of North Carolina has had a longstanding concern and commitment to the understanding and treatment of autistic communications handicapped children and their families. This commitment found expression in the only comprehensive statewide program for families confronted with this disability: Division for the Treatment and Education of Autistic and related Communication handicapped Children (TEACCH). Our program staff has been privileged to respond to this commitment by developing and providing the needed services and to engage in research informed by our clinical experience. Although many of the problems concerning these developmentally disabled children remain to be solved, substantial progress has been made during this past decade of collaboration among professionals, parents, and their government representatives. The TEACCH staff has resolved to mark the effectiveness of this collaboration by holding a series of annual conferences focused on the several major issues confronting these children and their families. The conferences are held in order to bring together the best research knowledge available to us from throughout the country and to encourage participation by the different professional disciplines and concerned parents. In addition, these annual meetings form the basis for a series of books based on the conference theme. These books are however not merely the published proceedings of the presented papers; some chapters are expanded from conference presentations and many others were solicited from experts in the related areas of research and their service application.
