Excerpt from Herbart and Froebel An Attempt at Synthesis The notion of a synthesis of Herbart and Froebel was first suggested to the writer by Professor John Adams of London University in 1905 Already the outline of a synthesis has appeared in an article in the Educational Review written by Professor Welton and entitled A Synthesis of Herbart and Froebel 1 Dr F H Hayward himself an able Herbartian writer has admitted that this phrase suggests the vision of a third educational Secret beyond the secrets that seem to him to have been disclosed in the respective works of Froebel and of Herbart 2 The article by Professor Welton is suggestive and only too slight A more inclusive comparative study has been made by Professor macvannel of Columbia University With the work of Professor Welton and of Professor macvannel the present attempt at a synthesis is in general accord Like both of these it assumes the practical value of a philosophy of education It is however widely differentiated as to its aims from the former by its scope and from the latter by a less his torical mode of approach The writer is deeply indebted to Professor macvannel as well for his aid in the present under taking as for his invaluable contributions to a philosophy of education About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works ... The Educational Theories of Herbart and Froebel John Angus MacVannel,1905 Froebel's Educational Laws for All Teachers James Laughlin Hughes,1910

The Kindergarten Magazine ,1895 The Origins of American Philosophy of Education Joseph James Chambliss,2012-12-06 John Dewey once wrote Education is such an important interest of life that we should expect to find a philosophy of education just as there is a philosophy of art and of religion We should expect that is such a treatment of the subject as would show that the nature of existence renders education an integral and indispensable function of life. Indeed such treatments of education are at least as old as Plato's Republic. Even so it was not until the nineteenth century that the philosophy of education was recognized as a distinct discipline. Historically it has been one thing to treat education in such a manner as Dewey mentions it has been another thing to do so while deliberately making explicit a discipline with a subject matter which is in some sense distinct from that of other disciplines. The aim in the present study has been to study the origins of philosophy of education as a distinct discipline in the United States. In doing so origins are taken to mean first that from which the discipline has come and second that which initiates serves as a point of departure for what follows. In searching for origins I have explored the philosophic considerations of education from which came those distinct conceptions of the philosophy of education that were to serve as points of departure for later considerations of the discipline.
