Harrington, 2021-11-21 Over the years American especially New York audiences have evolved a consistent set of expectations for the Irish play Traditionally the term implied a specific subject matter invariably rural and Catholic and embodied a reductive notion of Irish drama and society This view continues to influence the types of Irish drama produced in the United States today By examining seven different opening nights in New York theaters over the course of the last century John Harrington considers the reception of Irish drama on the American stage and explores the complex interplay between drama and audience expectations All of these productions provoked some form of public disagreement when they were first staged in New York ranging from the confrontation between Shaw and the Society for the Suppression of Vice to the intellectual outcry provoked by billing Waiting for Godot as the laugh sensation of two continents The inaugural volume in the series Irish Literature History and Culture The Irish Play on the New York Stage explores the New York premieres of The Shaughraun 1874 Mrs Warren's Profession 1905 The Playboy of the Western World 1911 Exiles 1925 Within the Gates 1934 Waiting for Godot 1956 and Philadelphia Here I Come 1966      Ottomiller's Index to Plays in Collections Denise L. Copyright Office,1941 The Guermantes Way Marcel Proust, The twittering of the birds at daybreak sounded insipid to Fran oise Every word uttered by the maids upstairs made her jump disturbed by all their running about she kept asking herself what they could be doing In other words we had moved Certainly the servants had made no less noise in the attics of our old home but she knew them she had made of their comings and goings familiar events Now she faced even silence with a strained attention And as our new neighbourhood appeared to be as quiet as the boulevard on to which we had hitherto looked had been noisy the song distinct at a distance when it was still quite faint like an orchestral motif of a passer by brought tears to the eyes of a Fran oise in exile And so if I had been tempted to laugh at her in her misery at having to leave a house in which she was so well respected on all sides and had packed her trunks with tears according to the Use of Combray declaring superior to all possible houses that which had been ours on the other hand I who found it as hard to assimilate new as I found it easy to abandon old conditions I felt myself drawn towards our old servant when I saw that this installation of herself in a building where she had not received from the hall porter who did not yet know us the marks of respect necessary to her moral wellbeing had brought her positively to the verge of dissolution She alone could understand what I was feeling certainly her young footman was not the person to do so for him who was as unlike the Combray type as it was possible to conceive packing up moving living in another district were all like taking a holiday in which the novelty of one s surroundings gave one the same sense of refreshment as if one had actually travelled he thought he was in the country and a cold in the head afforded him as though he had been sitting in a draughty railway carriage the delicious sensation of having seen the world at each fresh sneeze he rejoiced that he had found so smart a place having always longed to be with people who travelled a lot And so without giving him a thought I went straight to Fran oise who in return for my having laughed at her tears over a removal which had left me cold now shewed an icy indifference to my sorrow but because she shared it The sensibility claimed by neurotic people is matched by their egotism they cannot abide the flaunting by others of the sufferings to which they pay an ever increasing attention in themselves Fran oise who would not allow the least of her own ailments to pass unnoticed if I were in pain would turn her head from me so that I should not have the satisfaction of seeing my sufferings pitied or so much as observed It was the same as soon as I tried to speak to her about our new house Moreover having been obliged a day or two later to return to the house we had just left to retrieve some clothes which had been overlooked in our removal while I as a result of it had still a temperature and like a boa constrictor that has just swallowed an ox felt myself painfully distended by the sight of a long trunk which my eyes had still to digest Fran oise with true feminine inconstancy came back saying that she had really thought she would stifle on our old boulevard it was so stuffy that she had found it quite a day s journey to get there that never had she seen such stairs that she would not go back to live there for a king s ransom not if you were to offer her millions a pure hypothesis and that everything everything that is to say to do with the kitchen and usual offices was much better fitted up in the new house Which it is high time now that the reader should be told and told also that we had moved into it because my grandmother not having been at all well though we took care to keep this reason from her was in need of better air was a flat forming part of the H tel de Guermantes
