Flutes Of Death:

Flutes of Death Driss Chraïbi, 1997      Flutes of Death Driss Chraïbi, 1985 The first book in a trilogy that continues with Mother Spring and Birth at Dawn this naturalistic allegory is about two Arabic speaking police officers who set out in the Atlas Mountains in search of a revolutionary Once in this mysterious region the officers with their postcolonial Westernized manners are challenged by the ferociously suspicious and independent minded Berber peoples Chra bi illustrates the clash between the modern and the traditional between those who are willing to make cultural accommodation and those who are assertive of ancient traditions At the same time in language that is sometimes acerbic and sometimes lyrical he illustrates the predicaments common to all ordinary people whether urban or peasant First published in French in 1981      Flutes of Death Driss Chraïbi, 1997      Death of the Flute Arthur J. Burks, 2011-09-16 Not always does the past bury its dead Out of the yellow waters of Pei Po came a strange vengeance to single out Dorus Noel in the tangle of New York's Chinatown excerpt China had left her mark upon Dorus Noel He thought of that now as he sat musing in his house on Mott Street in New York's Chinatown From somewhere out in the street or perhaps in a store next door a clock sounded the hour of three in the afternoon At the same time some of his own priceless clocks began to strike One of them he especially loved because it always gave him a smile It was a beautiful gem encrusted thing which had been given to Emperor Chien Lung by Louis Fifteenth of France and when it struck the hour eight tiny human figures in blue came out on its top and danced a tinkling minuet A second clock was all of glass save for its works which were surrounded like a serpent by a circular staircase When this clock struck three it did it in odd fashion A gold ball came through a hole in the fourth step and rolled down three steps making a tinkling noise At four o'clock the ball fell a step further taking the additional hour to travel back up the circular stairway Now the one clock danced the minuet the other rolled its gilded ball down the three steps thus striking the hour Dorus Noel sighed Thank all the gods he murmured that Chu Chul is dead He must be With my own eyes I saw his clutching yellow hand sink under the muddy waters of the Pei Ho at Tientsin and I waited for two months for his resurrection which did not transpire My work here in New York will be easy compared to the years long game of hide and seek with The Cricket Noel had formed the habit of talking to himself because he found it easier to think and he did not speak in Chinese because in China anybody who listened might have been a minion of Chu Chul Now he rose from his desk and strode to a mirror on the wall threading his way through the many treasures which filled his study He passed the red lacquer screen with its decorations of tiny bird feathers He circled the crooked screen just inside the door which kept out evil spirits because they could only travel in a straight line      World Flut lore Dale A.
