

Food Security Perspectives: Focus on Asia and the Philippines

by Angelina Briones, Jocelyn Cajuste and Charmaine Ramos

Introduction

The world today has the capacity to produce more food than it can consume. The situation is envisioned to prevail if resource base is made sustainable, science continues to raise crop productivity, and national and international policy environment enable food producers to achieve efficiency, equity, and sustainability. However, millions of the poor still are unable to partake of the abundance of food supply. In recognition of this irony, the 1996 Rome Declaration states that food security exists when all people, at all times, have physical and economic access to sufficient, safe and nutritious food to meet their dietary needs and food preferences for an active and healthy life.

The irony of hunger coexisting with adequate food supply is most pronounced among low income countries. The situation is most dire where local agroenvironments are unfavorable for ample food production. For developing countries in Asia where agroenvironments favor verdant agriculture, the food security issue is a continuum of adequate food production, stable food supply and access of every household to food bundles of proper nutrition at all times.

Sustainable food production systems ensure adequate and supply while adequate distribution and purchasing power of consumers ensure unfettered access. Rich consumers may access food from producers across oceans or continents. World trade today facilitates this form of access. Also, current world view still ignores externalities of food trade arising from energy consumption and transportation. But the primary concern here is food security of the lower income countries whose bulk of population depends on agriculture, such as that obtaining in most countries of Asia.

The agriculture sector across Asia propelled the region to be the world's leader in agricultural growth in the 1990s from a bottom position since the 1960s. Highlighting this achievement is the fact that agricultural growth surpassed population growth. Some countries performed well in agriculture, along with services and industry, and achieved impressive economic growth. On Asia's feat in agriculture comes a vital question: Is agricultural growth enabling the rural populace to have access to adequate food?

Subjecting national food systems to the globalization now poses new challenges and dilemmas to shaping food security policies at the national and international levels. The freer flow of foodstuff across countries present potential economic gains in terms of widening the food supply pool and driving consumer prices down. At the same time, there are important considerations that have to be dealt with in a nation's attempt to establish the desired balance between domestic food production and importation abroad.

animate state society relations in authoritarian regimes this will be essential reading for students and scholars of civil society authoritarianism and Asian politics more generally      Solution Focused Practice in Asia Debbie Hogan, Dave Hogan, Jane Tuomola, Alan K. L. Yeo, 2016-12-08 This book is a collection of solution focused practice across Asia offering case examples from the fields of therapy supervision education coaching and organisation consulting It demonstrates the usefulness of the solution focused approach in the Asian context by providing practice based evidence and highlights the diversity of application By sharing real case examples in action across Asia it is the aim of this book to stimulate the curious and inspire the converted It gives readers a taste of what it is like to use this approach within an Asian context in different areas of practice and within a broad spectrum of clinical issues The examples offer exciting and creative ways in which solution focused practice can be used within the Asian context with the hope that more practitioners will be curious enough to give solution focused practice serious consideration as a viable evidence based practice      Social Activism in Southeast Asia Michele Ford, 2013 Social Activism in Southeast Asia examines the ways in which social movements operate in a region characterized by a history of authoritarian regimes and relatively weak civil society It situates cutting edge accounts of activism around civil and political rights globalization peace the environment migrant and factory labour the rights of middle and working class women and sexual identity in an overarching framework of analysis that forefronts the importance of human rights and the state as a focus for social activism Drawing on contemporary evidence from Cambodia Indonesia Malaysia Myanmar the Philippines Singapore Thailand and Timor Leste the book explores the ways in which social movement actors engage with their international allies the community and the state in order to promote social change As well as providing detailed and nuanced analyses of particular movements in specific areas of Southeast Asia the book addresses difficult questions about the politics strategies and authenticity of social movements      International Handbook on Education in Southeast Asia Lorraine Pe Symaco, Martin Hayden, 2021-12-23 This International Handbook provides a detailed account of the education systems of 11 Southeast Asian nations including Brunei Darussalam Cambodia Indonesia Lao People s Democratic Republic Malaysia Myanmar the Philippines Singapore Thailand Timor Leste and Vietnam It presents a systematic sector by sector explanation of how these national education systems deliver educational services and respond to national and international issues and challenges With 56 chapters the International Handbook is the region s most comprehensive educational reference source In the first of its chapters the editors introduce the regional context and draw attention to the distinctive characteristics of each of the 11 systems Southeast Asia representing 8.5% of the world s population is as dynamic as it is diverse The International Handbook charts progress and establishes a benchmark for documenting future developments It also provides a stepping off point for more detailed investigations of decision making processes and outcomes across the 11 national education systems      Strategic Cultures and Security Policies in the Asia-Pacific Jeffrey S. Lantis, 2016-03-22 This book shows how one of the most powerful tools of security studies strategic culture illuminates the origins and implications of the Asia Pacific region's difficult issues from the rise of China and the American pivot to the shifting calculations of many other actors. Strategic culture sometimes challenges and always enriches prevailing neo-realist presumptions about the region. It provides a bridge between material and ideational explanations of state behavior and helps capture the tension between neoclassical realist and constructivist approaches. The case studies in this book survey the role of strategic culture in the behaviors of Australia, China, Japan, the Philippines, South Korea, and the United States. They show the contrast between structural expectations and cultural predispositions as realist geopolitical security threats and opportunities interact with domestic elite and popular interpretation of historical narratives and distinctive political/military cultures to influence security policies. The concluding chapter devotes special attention to methodological issues at the heart of strategic cultural studies as well as how culture may impact the potential for future conflict or cooperation in the region. The result is a body of work that helps deepen our understanding of strategic cultures in the Asia Pacific in comparative perspective and enrich security studies. This book was published as a special issue of Contemporary Security Policy.      The United States and Asia Robert G. Sutter, 2015-07-01. This book offers a cogent overview of the historical context and enduring patterns of U.S. relations with Asia. Noted scholar Robert G. Sutter provides a balanced analysis of post-Cold War dynamics in Asia which involve interrelated questions of security, economics, national identity, and regional institution building. He demonstrates how these critical concerns manifest a complex mix of realist, liberal, and constructivist tendencies that define the regional order. Sutter weighs how the recent US emphasis on re-engagement with the broader Asia Pacific fits within the context of regional dynamics. He assesses how the United States has responded to Asia's growing strength and importance while at the same time trying to maintain its leading position as an Asian power despite China's rising influence.

Price Interdependence Among Equity Markets in the Asia-Pacific Region: Focus on Australia and ASEAN Eduardo D. Roca, 2018-01-18. This title was first published in 2000. The text provides coverage of theoretical analysis and applications in the context of the Asia Pacific region.

Resourcing the Pivot to Asia United States. Congress. House. Committee on Foreign Affairs. Subcommittee on Asia and the Pacific, 2014.      Renewable Energy in East Asia Christopher M. Dent, 2014-11-27. Energy is crucial to the functioning of any human society and central to understanding East Asia's economic miracle. The region's rapid development over the last few decades has been inherently energy intensive and the impact on global energy security, climate change, and the twenty-first century global system generally is now very significant and will become more so over foreseeable years and decades to come. The region is already the world's largest energy consumer and greenhouse gas emitter, so establishing cleaner energy systems in East Asia is both a regional and global challenge, and renewable energy has a critically important part to play in meeting it. This book presents a comprehensive study of renewable energy development in East Asia It begins by examining renewable energy development in global and historic contexts and situates East Asia's position in the recent worldwide expansion of renewables This same approach is applied on sector specific chapter studies on wind solar hydropower geothermal ocean wave and tidal and bioenergy and to general trends in renewable energy policy Governments play a critical role in promoting renewables and their contribution to tackling climate change and other environmental challenges Christopher M Dent argues this is particularly relevant to East Asia where state capacity practice has been increasingly allied to ecological modernisation thinking to form what he calls new developmentalism the principal foundation on which renewables have developed in the region as well as how East Asia's low carbon development is being generally promoted Renewable Energy in East Asia will be of huge interest to students and scholars of Asian studies economics political economy energy studies business development international relations and environmental studies It will also appeal to researchers working on the subject matter in government business international organisations think tanks and civil society organisations

Production Networks in Asia and Europe Rogier Busser, Yuri Sadoi, 2004-02-24 This book explores Japanese investment in Europe and Southeast Asia in relation to the automobile industry In Part I the authors examine industrial organization and policy issues in Thailand Malaysia The Philippines and Indonesia looking at Japanese investment and the relative policy successes and failures in these host countries Part II looks at skill formation systems in the Japanese dominated automobile industry in Southeast Asia and in Part III the authors focus on the EU and the very different influence of Japanese investment
