

10th Grade

College Planning

Now that you're a sophomore, it's time to get more serious about planning and preparing for college. To help you stay focused and on track, here's a list of the things you need to do this year.

Work hard to get good grades

The stronger your high school academic record, the more college options you'll have. Grades are the first thing colleges look at when determining whether to accept an applicant— particularly their grades in college prep classes.

Take college prep classes

In order to be prepared for college-level work, colleges recommend that students take the following courses in high school:

- 4 years of English
- 3–4 years of math (Algebra I & II, Geometry)
- 3–4 years of science
- 2–3 years of the same foreign language
- 3 years of social studies
- 1 year of fine or performing arts

Get involved

Colleges are looking for students who are active and involved in their school and community. Participate in school activities, do some volunteer work, and take time to develop your interests and talents.

new capitalist paradigm that helps elevate the poor and improve the human condition Incorporating commentary from some of the top minds in the field of microfinance this book puts the method of microfinance in perspective Lost Talent Sandra Hanson,2010-08-12 The challenge faced by the U S in the next two decades is developing a balanced qualified and well trained workforce for jobs in science and other technical fields For Hanson this includes equity for women which begins with creating conditions so that young girls who start out doing well in science do not end up with little training and knowledge The recovery of this lost talent is the central concern of this book Architect ,1910 Hearings United States. Passing the Torch Paul Attewell,David Lavin,Thurston Domina,Tania Levey,2007-04-05 The steady expansion of college enrollment rates over the last generation has been heralded as a major step toward reducing chronic economic disparities But many of the policies that broadened access to higher education including affirmative action open admissions and need based financial aid have come under attack in recent years by critics alleging that schools are admitting unqualified students who are unlikely to benefit from a college education In Passing the Torch Paul Attewell David Lavin Thurston Domina and Tania Levey follow students admitted under the City University of New York s open admissions policy tracking its effects on them and their children to find out whether widening college access can accelerate social mobility across generations Unlike previous research into the benefits of higher education Passing the Torch follows the educational achievements of three generations over thirty years The book focuses on a cohort of women who entered CUNY between 1970 and 1972 when the university began accepting all graduates of New York City high schools and increasing its representation of poor and minority students The authors survey these women in order to identify how the opportunity to pursue higher education affected not only their long term educational attainments and family well being but also how it affected their children s educational achievements Comparing the record of the CUNY alumnae to peers nationwide the authors find that when women from underprivileged backgrounds go to college their children are more likely to succeed in school and earn college degrees themselves Mothers with a college degree are more likely to expect their children to go to college to have extensive discussions with their children and to be involved in their children s schools All of these parenting behaviors appear to foster higher test scores and college enrollment rates among their children In addition college educated women are more likely to raise their children in stable two parent households and to earn higher incomes both factors have been demonstrated to increase children s educational success The evidence marshaled in this important book reaffirms the American ideal of upward mobility through education As the first study to indicate that increasing access to college among today s disadvantaged students can reduce educational gaps in the next generation Passing the Torch makes a powerful argument in favor of college for all Papers and Proceedings American Library Association. Annual Conference,1907 Strategic Finance ,2011-04-13 Contemporary Issues in Sociology of Sport Andrew Yiannakis,Merrill J. Melnick,2001 Melnick PhD

Dober,2000-07-04 A practical guide to creating sites plans and designs for the campus landscape Broad lawns open spaces wooded groves the campus landscape is both the seat and symbol of higher education It also has a growing role to play for institutions seeking to put their best foot forward in pursuit of students and funding This comprehensive handbook provides information instruction and ideas on planning and designing every aspect of the campus landscape from parking lots to playing fields Using real world examples of classic and contemporary campus landscapes this unique resource features Coverage of landscape restoration and regeneration as well as new projects An assessment matrix for consistent effective evaluation of existing and proposed plans More than 175 photographs and drawings of campus landscapes Detailed captions citations and design guidelines for significant features Coverage of increasingly important areas such as security maintenance and the environment Meaningful Engagement in Educational Activity and Purposes for Learning Matthew Charles Andrews,2011 The American political culture that encourages competition on standardized tests epitomized by the policy of Race to the Top oversimplifies students motivation for learning This dissertation argues that educational research on student learning and activity engagement should consider motives beyond the pursuit of good grades in the classroom prestigious college credentials and going to school because it is what students are supposed to do In particular the studies highlight the moral inspirations and cultural habits behind students engagement in life activities and how inspiration and habits help to direct learning in life A case study of an ordinary high school senior articulates a common motive to enroll in college to achieve success in life Comparative case studies contrast emotional experiences with social responsibilities in order to articulate purposes for learning beyond standardized achievement Findings suggest that volunteer community service engagements with family involvement in religious activities and working for pay could provide inspiration for students to engage in learning in life Building the Nation Steven Conn,Max Page,2003-06-23 Some anthologies seem slapdash or opportunistic others are labors of love informed by a mastery of a particular field and a passion for sharing the heterogeneous richness of their documents Building the Nation is happily one of the latter Vastly useful Preservation
