Plant Resistance to Herbivores and Pathogens Robert S. Fritz, Ellen L. Simms, 2012-07-15 Far from being passive elements in the landscape plants have developed many sophisticated chemical and mechanical means of deterring organisms that seek to prey on them This volume draws together research from ecology evolution agronomy and plant pathology to produce an ecological genetics perspective on plant resistance in both natural and agricultural systems By emphasizing the ecological and evolutionary basis of resistance the book makes an important contribution to the study of how phytophages and plants coevolve Plant Resistance to Herbivores and Pathogens not only reviews the literature pertaining to plant resistance from a number of traditionally separate fields but also examines significant questions that will drive future research Among the topics explored are selection for resistance in plants and for virulence in phytophages methods for studying natural variation in plant resistance the factors that maintain intraspecific variation in resistance and the ecological consequences of within population genetic variation for herbivorous insects and fungal pathogens A comprehensive review of the theory and information on a large rapidly growing and important subject Douglas J Futuyma State University of New York Stony Brook

Models of Adaptive Behaviour Alasdair I. Houston, John M. McNamara, 1999-08-19 Models of Adaptive Behaviour sets out a framework for adaptive explanations of behaviour and applies this to give analyses of a range of biological issues such as energetic gain energy predation trade offs dynamic games state dependent life histories annual routines and fluctuating environments It gives a definitive account of this exciting field summarizing previous research presenting material and suggesting directions for research Organisms differ in terms of their state for example in their size energy relations or temperature which often affects their behaviour The framework adopted in this book takes this into account and provides a common currency for comparing diverse actions Ultimately this could lead to the development of state dependent dynamic models This book will be a revelation for graduate students and researchers interested in behavioural or evolutionary biology Extreme Environmental Change and Evolution Ary A.

Hoffmann, Peter A. Parsons, 1997-07-10 Most natural populations intermittently experience extremely stressful conditions This book discusses how such conditions can cause periods of intense selection increasing both phenotypic and genetic variation and allowing organisms with novel characteristics to be first generated and then established in the population The authors argue that stressful conditions can have a major impact on the environment backing up their arguments with evidence from the fossil record They suggest further that as a consequence periods of stress must be taken into consideration when long term conservation strategies are planned particularly as stressful conditions are becoming increasingly prevalent as a result of human activities This broad overview will be of great interest to students and researchers in the field of evolutionary biology genetics ecology palaeontology and conservation biology Newsletter, 1972 Mr. America John D. Evolution Of Life Histories Derek Roff, 1993-04-30 There are many different types of organisms in the world they differ in size physiology appearance and life history The challenge for evolutionary biology is to explain how such diversity arises The Evolution of Life Histories does this by showing that natural selection is the principal underlying force molding life history variation The book describes in particular the ways in which variation can be analyzed and predicted It covers both the genetic and optimization approaches to life history analysis and gives an overview of the general framework of life history theory and the mathematical tools by which predictions can be made and tested Factors affecting the age schedule of birth and death and the costs of reproduction are discussed The Evolution of Life Histories concentrates on those theoretical developments that have been tested experimentally It will interest both students and professionals in evolution evolutionary ecology mathematical and theoretical biology and zoology and entomology Mathematical Ecology of Plant Species Competition Anthony G. Pakes, Ross A. Maller, 1990 Presented in this document is a class of deterministic models describing the dynamics of two plant species whose characteristics are common to the majority of annual plants that have a seedbank Formulated in terms of elementary dynamical systems these models were developed in response to four major questions on the long term outcomes of binary mixtures of plant species Is ultimate coexistence possible If not which strain will win Does the mixture approach an equilibrium If so how long does the mixture take to attain it The book gives a detailed account of model construction analysis and application to field data obtained from long term trials In the particular case study modelled the species involved are two pastoral strains whose dynamics have critical agricultural and economic implications for the areas in which they are found including North America the Mediterranean region and Australia This study will be valuable to researchers and students in mathematical biology and to agronomists and botanists interested in population dynamics
