Simla Village Tales Alice Elizabeth Dracott, 1906 Simla Village Tales Or, Folk Tales from the Himalayas Alice Elizabeth Dracott, 2023-07-15 In introducing Simla Village Tales to my readers I wish to acknowledge gratefully the valuable assistance given me by my sister Mabel Baldwin who when I was obliged to leave India suddenly owing to nervous breakdown after the terrible earthquake which visited the Punjab in April 1905 kindly undertook to complete from the same sources where I had got them my collection of folk tales Twenty excellent stories contributed by her include Tabaristan The Priest and the Barber The Fourth Wife is Wisest and Abul Hussain Of the down country tales my husband kindly contributed Anar Pari The Dog Temple The Beautiful Milkmaid and The Enchanted Bird Music and Stream Both my sister and my husband can speak the language fluently and as the former has resided many years in the Punjab I am confident that her translations are as literal as my own All the tales were taken down in pencil just as they were told and as nearly as possible in the words of the narrators who were village women belonging to the agricultural class of Hindus in the Simla district I must add a word of thanks to Mr Hallam Murray for his invaluable assistance with the illustrations In one or two instances I was asked if I would allow a Paharee man well versed in local folk lore to relate a few stories to me but for obvious reasons I was obliged to decline the offer for many Simla Village tales related to me by women and not included in this book were grotesquely unfit for publication The typical Paharee woman is as a rule extremely good looking and a born flirt she has a pleasant gay manner and can always see a joke people who wish to chaff her discover an adept at repartee The Simla Village Woman whose photograph is reproduced is a very good type I found her most gentle and lovable Her little boy and last surviving child has died since the photograph was taken last year yet the young mother bears all her griefs with a fortitude which is really remarkable Himalayan folk lore with its beauty wit and mysticism is a most fascinating study and makes one grieve to think that the day is fast approaching when the honest rugged hill folk of Northern India FROM THE BOOKS will lose their fireside tales under the influence of modern civilisation The hurry and rush of official life in India's Summer Capital leaves no time for the song of birds or scent of flowers these like the ancient and exquisite fireside tales of its people have been hustled away into distant valleys and remote villages where on cold winter nights Paharees young and old gather together to hear these oft repeated tales From their cradle under the shade of ancient deodars beside the rocks forests and streams of the mighty Himalayan mountains have I sought these tales to place them upon the great Bookshelf of the World
