Identity Card:

Identity Cards Great Britain. Parliament. House of Commons. Home Affairs Committee, 2004 The Committee's report examines the Government's proposals for the introduction of an identify cards scheme Cm 6020 ISBN 0101602022 published in November 2003 and the draft Identity Cards Bill Cm 6178 ISBN 0101617828 published in April 2004 for consultation Issues discussed include a brief history of identity cards in the UK international developments including EU standards and schemes in Sweden Germany Canada and Australia the aims of the Government's proposals in relation to preventing illegal working immigration abuse organised crime identity fraud and terrorism opposition to ID cards on grounds of principle and in practical terms the voluntary stage of the scheme Parliamentary scrutiny and concern over function creep security issues biometrics and specific clauses of the draft Bill The Committee draws 91 conclusions and recommendations and judges overall that an ID scheme could make a significant contribution to tackling crime and terrorism but its introduction carries clear risks both for individual citizens and in practical implementation Concerns are raised over the lack of clarity and definition in key elements of the proposed scheme as well as the lack of openness in the procurement process These concerns must be addressed if it is to secure public confidence and to work in practice Playing the Identity Card Colin J Bennett, David Lyon, 2013-01-11 National identity cards are in the news While paper ID documents have been used in some countries for a long time today's rapid growth features high tech IDs with built in biometrics and RFID chips Both long term trends towards e Government and the more recent responses to 9 11 have prompted the quest for more stable identity systems Commercial pressures mix with security rationales to catalyze ID development aimed at accuracy efficiency and speed New ID systems also depend on computerized national registries Many questions are raised about new IDs but they are often limited by focusing on the cards themselves or on privacy Playing the Identity Card shows not only the benefits of how the state can see citizens better using these instruments but also the challenges this raises for civil liberties and human rights ID cards are part of a broader trend towards intensified surveillance and as such are understood very differently according to the history and cultures of the countries concerned Identity Card Technologies Great Britain: Parliament: House of Commons: Science and Technology Committee, 2006-08-04 This report focuses upon the Home Office's identity cards scheme which uses various technologies including biometrics information and communication technology ICT and smart cards It explores the ways in which scientific advice risk and evidence are being managed in relation to technologies that are continually developing The Home Office has followed good practice by the establishment of advisory committees the use of Office of Government Commerce OGC Gateway Reviews and the development of risk management strategies along with a policy of gradual implementation But the Committee has identified weaknesses in the use of scientific advice and evidence There has been a lack of transparency surrounding the incorporation of scientific advice the procurement process and the ICT system Consultations have been limited in scope and their objectives have been unclear Only some aspects of the scheme such as the biometrics have been determined The Home Office's decisions demonstrate an inconsistent approach to scientific evidence and the Committee is concerned that choices regarding biometric technology have preceded trials With extensive trialling still to take place the Committee is sceptical about the validity of projected costs The Committee recommends that the Home Office seeks advice on ICT from senior and experienced professionals and establishes an ICT assurance committee It is crucial that the Home Office increases clarity and transparency across the programme not only in problem areas The programme should also be flexible enough to change should evidence emerge that contradicts existing assumptions

Identity Cards Great Britain. Home Office, 2004 This publication sets out the responses to the Home Office consultation paper issued in April 2004 Cm 6178 ISBN 0101617828 which set out the text of the Government's draft Identity Cards Bill along with accompanying explanatory notes regulatory and race equality impact assessments Responses to the consultation exercise which ended in July 2004 are given from the general public and a wide variety of organisations including legal bodies local government trade unions organisations representing ethnic minorities gypsies and travellers and refugees police organisations business organisations and the Information Commissioner The document also sets out the findings from other research focus groups and external events undertaken to gauge public attitudes towards the Government's proposals for identify cards The Government's draft Bill will now be reviewed in the light of these consultation responses as well as the recommendations made by the House of Commons Home Affairs Select Committee in their report HCP 130 I session 2003 04 ISBN 0215019059 published in July 2004
