Economic Persuasions Stephen Gudeman,2009-06-01 As the transition from socialism to a market economy gathered speed in the early 1990s many people proclaimed the final success of capitalism as a practice and neoliberal economics as its accompanying science But with the uneven achievements of the transition the deepening problems of development persistent unemployment the widening of the wealth gap and expressions of resistance the discipline of economics is no longer seen as a mirror of reality or as a unified science How should we understand economics and more broadly the organization and disorganization of material life In this book international scholars from anthropology and economics adopt a rhetorical perspective in order to make sense of material life and the theories about it Re examining central problems in the two fields and using ethnographic and historical examples they explore the intersections between these disciplines contrast their methods and epistemologies and show how a rhetorical approach offers a new mode of analysis while drawing on established contributions

A Blessing and a Curse Matt Wilde,2023-10-10 A Blessing and a Curse examines the lived experience of political change moral uncertainty and economic crisis amid Venezuela s controversial Bolivarian Revolution Drawing on ethnographic research conducted in an urban barrio over the course of a decade Matt Wilde argues that everyday life in this period was intimately shaped by a critical contradiction that in their efforts to capture a larger portion of oil money and distribute it more widely among the population the governments of Hugo Ch vez and Nicol s Maduro pursued policies that ultimately entrenched Venezuela in the very position of dependency they sought to overcome Offering a new synthesis between anthropological work on energy politics and morality the book explores how the use of oil money to fund the revolution s social programs and political reforms produced profound cultural anxieties about the contaminating effects of petroleum revenues in everyday settings Tracing how these anxieties rippled out into community life family networks and local politics Wilde shows how questions about how to live a good life came to be intimately shaped by Venezuela s contradictory relationship with oil In doing so he brings a vital perspective to contemporary debates about energy transitions by proposing a new way of thinking about the political and moral economies of natural resources in postcolonial settings On Farming Mason White,Maya
