Geographies of Race and Food Rachel Slocum, Arun Saldanha, 2016-04-15 While interest in the relations of power and identity in food explodes, a hesitancy remains about calling these racial. What difference does race make in the fields where food is grown, the places it is sold and the manner in which it is eaten? How do we understand farming and provisioning, tasting and picking, eating and being eaten, hunger and gardening better by paying attention to race? This collection argues there is an unacknowledged racial dimension to the production and consumption of food under globalization. Building on case studies from across the world, it advances the conceptualization of race by emphasizing embodiment, circulation and materiality, while adding to food advocacy an antiracist perspective it often lacks. Within the three socio-physical spatialities of food fields, bodies and markets the collection reveals how race and food are intricately linked An international and multidisciplinary team of scholars complements each other to shed light on how human groups become entrenched in myriad hierarchies through food at scales from the dining room and market stall to the slave trade and empire Following foodways as they constitute racial formations in often surprising ways the chapters achieve a novel approach to the process of race as one that cannot be reduced to biology culture or capitalism     A Second Helping Alexa Johnston,2011-05-25 More classics of New Zealand home baking drawn from mid 20th century manuscript and community cookery books Each recipe is accompanied by historical detail A follow up to the author s Ladies a plate 2008     Keeping a Low Profile Brigitte Bönisch-Brednich,2002 This oral history of German immigration to New Zealand is based on extensive field research including 102 life history interviews and in depth study of archival sources and secondary literature Issues of national and individual identity are also addressed
