

THE BEST TIME TO BATHE.—It is best to bathe just before going to bed, as any danger of catching cold is thus avoided, and the complexion is improved by keeping warm for several hours after leaving the bath. A couple of pounds of bran put into a thin bag and then in the bath tub is excellent for softening the skin. It should be left to soak in a small quantity of water several hours before being used. The internal aids to a clear complexion are most of them well known, and the present season is the best for a thorough cleansing and purifying of the blood. The old-fashioned remedy of sulphur and molasses is considered among the best. Charcoal powdered and taken with water is said to be excellent, but it is most difficult to take. A strictly vegetable and fruit diet is followed by many for one or two weeks.—London Lancet.

Maritime Quarantine John Booker, 2016-12-05 As a maritime trading nation the issue of quarantine was one of constant concern to Britain Whilst naturally keen to promote international trade there was a constant fear of importing potentially devastating diseases into British territories In this groundbreaking study John Booker examines the methods by which British authorities sought to keep their territories free from contagious diseases and the reactions to and practical consequences of these policies Drawing upon a wealth of documentary sources Dr Booker paints a vivid picture of this controversial episode of British political and mercantile history concluding that quarantine was a peculiarly British disaster doomed to inefficiency by the royal prerogative and concerns for trade and individual liberty Whilst it may not have fatally hindered the economic development of Britain it certainly irritated the City and the mercantile elites and remained a source of constant political friction for many years As such an understanding of British maritime quarantine provides a fuller picture of attitudes to trade culture politics and medicine in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries Sessional Papers Great Britain.
