Merlin: A Poem Edwin Arlington Robinson, 2021-04-26 In Merlin A Poem Edwin Arlington Robinson unpacks the mythic labyrinth of Arthurian legend through the introspective lens of its titular character Merlin This narrative poem shines with Robinson's distinctive use of blank verse allowing for a fluid exploration of themes such as fate wisdom and the tension between knowledge and power Drawing upon both medieval lore and contemporary existential dilemmas the text delves deeply into Merlin's psychological landscape presenting him not merely as a wizard but as a complex figure grappling with his own immortality and the consequences of his prophetic gifts Robinson an American poet renowned for his keen observations of human nature and his mastery of form brings personal insights to this reimagining of Merlin His own life marked by struggle failure and a search for meaning reflects in the poem's existential inquiries making it resonate with readers on a profound level Robinson's dedication to crafting characters who embody both strength and vulnerability may stem from his own experiences and the intellectual circles he frequented where discussions of fate and free will were paramount Merlin A Poem is highly recommended for readers interested in a modern reinterpretation of classic mythology infused with psychological depth Scholars and poetry enthusiasts alike will appreciate Robinson's ability to evoke emotion while examining timeless questions about human existence This work invites readers to reflect on their own uncertainties and moral dilemmas making it a compelling addition to any literary collection

Women's Poetry of Late Imperial China Xiaorong Li, 2013-05-03 This study of poetry by women in late imperial China examines the metamorphosis of the trope of the inner chambers gui to which women were confined in traditional Chinese households and which in literature were both a real and an imaginary place Originally popularized in sixth century palace style poetry the inner chambers were used by male writers as a setting in which to celebrate female beauty to lament the loneliness of abandoned women and by extension to serve as a political allegory for the exile of loyal and upright male ministers spurned by the imperial court Female writers of lyric poetry ci soon adopted the theme beginning its transition from male fantasy to multidimensional representation of women and their place in society and eventually its manifestation in other poetic genres as well Emerging from the role of sexual objects within poetry late imperial women were agents of literary change in their expansion and complication of the boudoir theme While some take ownership and de eroticizing its imagery for their own purposes adding voices of children and older women and filling the inner chambers with purposeful activity such as conversation teaching religious ritual music sewing childcare and chess playing some simply want to escape from their confinement and protest gender restrictions imposed on women Women s Poetry of Late Imperial China traces this evolution across centuries providing and analyzing examples of poetic themes motifs and imagery associated with the inner chambers and demonstrating the complication and nuancing of the gui theme by increasingly aware and sophisticated women writers

First English Reader, Prose and Poetry F.S. Gomm,1872 Japanese Literature: Including Selections from Genji Monogatari and Classical Poetry and Drama of Japan Various Authors,2020-09-28 Genji Monogatari the original of this translation is one of the standard works of Japanese literature It has been regarded for centuries as a national treasure The title of the work is by no means unknown to those Europeans who take an interest in Japanese matters for it is mentioned or alluded to in almost every European work relating to our country It was written by a lady who from her writings is considered one of the most talented women that Japan has ever produced She was the daughter of Fujiwara Tametoki a petty Court noble remotely connected with the great family of Fujiwara in the tenth century after Christ and was generally called Murasaki Shikib About these names a few remarks are necessary The word Shikib means ceremonies and is more properly a name adopted with the addition of certain suffixes to designate special Court offices Thus the term Shikib Ki is synonymous with master of the ceremonies and Shikib no Ji with secretary to the master of the ceremonies Hence it might at first sight appear rather peculiar if such an appellation should happen to be used as the name of a woman It was however a custom of the period for noble ladies and their attendants to be often called after such offices generally with the suffix No Kata indicating the female sex and somewhat corresponding to the word madam This probably originated in the same way as the practice in America of calling ladies by their husbands official titles such as Mrs Captain Mrs Judge etc only that in the case of the Japanese custom the official title came in time to be used without any immediate association with the offices themselves and often even as a maiden name From this custom our authoress came to be called Shikib a name which did not originally apply to a person To this another name Murasaki was added in order to distinguish her from other ladies who may also have been called Shikib Murasaki means violet whether the flower or the color Concerning the origin of this appellation there exist two different opinions Those holding one derive it from her family name Fujiwara for Fujiwara literally means the field of Wistaria and the color of the Wistaria blossom is violet Those holding the other trace it to the fact that out of several persons introduced into the story Violet Murasaki in the text is a most modest and gentle woman whence it is thought that the admirers of the work transferred the name to the authoress herself In her youth she was maid of honor to a daughter of the then prime minister who became eventually the wife of the Emperor Ichiji better known by her surname Ji t Monin and who is especially famous as having been the patroness of our authoress Murasaki Shikib married a noble named Nobtaka to whom she bore a daughter who herself wrote a work of fiction called Sagoromo narrow sleeves She survived her husband Nobtaka some years and spent her latter days in quiet retirement dying in the year 992 after Christ The diary which she wrote during her retirement is still in existence and her tomb may yet be seen in a Buddhist temple in Ki to the old capital where the principal scenes of her story are laid
