Learn:

Learning about historic architecture, trees, landscape and other site aspects is the first step in conservation and effective use of historic heritage.

Conserve:

We should maintain University Parks which reflect the University's history and landscape values of the city, and preserve architecture, buried cultural properties and museum collections.

Carry on the torch:

With conservation efforts we can keep using our historic heritage and pass it on in good condition to future generations.

Develop History:

Historic heritage is a valuable asset for the University developed by many people over many years, and will be continuously developed.

Optimize:

Optimize creative use of historic heritage by the University through 100-year history of Hokkaido University's campus and visualizing a future image.

Keep trying:

Continuous trial and error is required to develop historic heritage for Hokkaido University and its local community.

Open up a future:

Historic heritage can pave the way for a new future of Hokkaido University and the local community work together on heritage conservation and its effective use.

Upgrade:

We can add value to the historic heritage through effective use aiming contribution to the local community and our future.

Go sustainable:

To achieve a sustainable campus, historic heritage together with architecture and landscape should be sustainable to the future culture and creativity.
