

A SELECT ANNOTATED BIBLIOGRAPHY ON THE HOLOCAUST

Eva Fleischner
Montclair State College

"Whether you like it or not, the Holocaust won't go away." There is ample evidence that this remark, made at a recent meeting of Jewish and Christian scholars, is correct. More than thirty years after the Holocaust we witness the striking phenomenon that interest in the event, instead of diminishing, is increasing: the literature on the Holocaust is growing as new sources come to light—Holocaust courses on college campuses (and here and there in high schools) are multiplying—new films on the Holocaust continue to be made. How are we to explain this growth in concern? Let me suggest a few reasons for it:

—The sheer enormity of the catastrophe is such that we are not able to cope with it when it was first revealed to the world. While some books on the Holocaust began to appear in the late forties and early fifties, it took twenty-five years for the flood gates to open; they are open still, and there is no sign that they will close in the near future.

—The event has traumatized Jewish experience; given the long historical memory of Jews, it will no doubt continue to do so. Judaism has been profoundly shaped and reshaped across the centuries by historical experiences—of salvation above all, but also of destruction: by what Emil Fackenheim calls "root experiences" of the Jewish people. Among these the Holocaust is inscribed once and for all.

—For non-Jews, especially Christians, the Holocaust necessitates a confrontation with certain fundamental aspects of Christian tradition and teaching that lead some Christians today to raise new and painful questions, such as the credibility of the churches, and whether, after Auschwitz, it is still possible to call oneself Christian. Hence a radical reassessment of Christian teaching and tradition is taking place in some circles today, a process which is likely to continue for years to come.

*Eva Fleischner is Associate Professor of Religion at Montclair State College in New Jersey. A member of the International Grail, a movement for Christian laywomen, she lectures and writes on the significance of Judaism for Christians. She is the editor of the recently published volume Auschwitz: Beginning of a New Era? (KTAV, 1977), a collection of papers given at the International Symposium on the Holocaust held at the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in June 1974 in New York. She was one of the organizers of the Symposium. Her doctoral dissertation, The View of Judaism in German Christian Theology Since 1945, was published by Scarecrow Press in 1975. She is a consultant of the Faith and Order Commission of the National Council of Churches, and a member of the Steering Committee of the NCC's Office of Christian-Jewish Relations.*
