Drug Crisis, where Do We Go from Here? United States. Congress. House. Committee on Government Reform, 1999

The Suburban Crisis Matthew D. Lassiter, 2023-11-07 How the drug war transformed American political culture Since the 1950s the American war on drugs has positioned white middle class youth as sympathetic victims of illegal drug markets who need rehabilitation instead of incarceration whenever they break the law The Suburban Crisis traces how politicians the media and grassroots political activists crusaded to protect white families from perceived threats while criminalizing and incarcerating urban minorities and how a troubling legacy of racial injustice continues to inform the war on drugs today In this incisive political history Matthew Lassiter shows how the category of the white middle class victim has been as central to the politics and culture of the drug war as racial stereotypes like the foreign trafficker urban pusher and predatory ghetto addict He describes how the futile mission to safeguard and control white suburban youth shaped the enactment of the nation's first mandatory minimum drug laws in the 1950s and how soaring marijuana arrests of white Americans led to demands to refocus on real criminals in inner cities The 1980s brought just say no moralizing in the white suburbs and militarized crackdowns in urban centers The Suburban Crisis reveals how the escalating drug war merged punitive law enforcement and coercive public health into a discriminatory system for the social control of teenagers and young adults and how liberal and conservative lawmakers alike pursued an agenda of racialized criminalization

Kotlowitz The Atlantic Through the stories of five American families a masterful and timely exploration of how hope history and racial denial collide in the suburbs and their schools Outside Atlanta a middle class Black family faces off with a school system seemingly bent on punishing their teenage son North of Dallas a conservative white family relocates to an affluent suburban enclave but can't escape the changes sweeping the country On Chicago's North Shore a multiracial mom joins an ultraprogressive challenge to the town's liberal status quo In Compton California whose suburban roots are now barely recognizable undocumented Hispanic parents place their gifted son's future in the hands of educators at a remarkable elementary school And outside Pittsburgh a Black mother moves to the same street where author Benjamin Herold grew up then confronts the destructive legacy left behind by white families like his Disillusioned braids these human stories together with penetrating local and national history to reveal a vicious cycle undermining the dreams upon which American suburbia was built For generations upwardly mobile white families have extracted opportunity from the nation's heavily subsidized suburbs then moved on before the bills for maintenance and repair came due leaving the mostly Black and Brown families who followed to clean up the ensuing mess But now sweeping demographic shifts and the dawning realization that endless expansion is no longer feasible are disrupting this pattern forcing everyday families to confront a truth their communities were designed to avoid The suburban lifestyle dream is a Ponzi scheme whose unraveling threatens us all How do we come to terms with this troubled history How do we build a future in which all children can thrive Drawing upon his decorated career as an education journalist Herold explores these pressing debates with expertise and perspective Then alongside Bethany Smith the mother from his old neighborhood who contributes a powerful epilogue to the book he offers a hopeful path toward renewal The result is nothing short of a journalistic masterpiece
