Bakker,Mr.Manuk Ghazanchyan,Alex Ho,Vibha Nanda,2020-06-19 In the last few decades there has been little convergence of income levels in Latin America with those in the United States in sharp contrast with both emerging Asia and emerging Europe This paper argues that lack of convergence was not the result of low investment Latin America is poorer because of lower human capital levels and lower TFP not because of a lower capital output ratio Cross country differences of TFP in turn are associated with differences in human capital governance and business climate indicators We demonstrate that once levels of human capital and governance are taken into account there is strong conditional cross country convergence Poor countries with high levels of human capital governance or business climate indicators converge rapidly Poor countries without those attributes do not We show that low investment is the result of low TFP and thus GDP growth not the cause      The Efficiency of Government Expenditure Ms.Keiko Honjo,Mr.Sanjeev Gupta,Marijn Verhoeven,1997-11-01 This paper assesses the efficiency of government expenditure on education and health in 38 countries in Africa in 1984 95 both in relation to each other and compared with countries in Asia and the Western Hemisphere The results show that on average countries in Africa are less efficient than countries in Asia and the Western Hemisphere however education and health spending in Africa became more efficient during that period The assessment further suggests that improvements in educational attainment and health output in African countries require
