The Role of Governments

Nick Mornhinweg, 2023-06-23 Master s Thesis from the year 2021 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance University of Mannheim language English abstract This work was the first attempt at creating and assessing a framework of governments role within the open social innovation space as well as testing the roles correlation with perceived project success Open social innovation OSI is a framework applicable in the context of social issues in an increasingly complex world It is an extension of open innovation OI into the social sphere particularly incorporating concepts of social innovation SI OI is conceptualized as innovation based on the flow of information beyond and across organizational limits SI is concerned with providing or developing goods with public goods characteristics hence non excludable and non rivalrous goods contributing to societal well being Thus SIs are addressing non monetary objectives such as social needs or social values Thus OSI is defined as innovation founded interorganizational knowledge flows along a business model to derive social change Innovation is generally described as part of the process ensuring organizations survival and growth by renewing services products or processes SI and consequentially OSI can be characterized by an absence of financial incentives for participation and are thus generally at risk of being underproduced Recent research indicates that the involvement of governments in OSI projects might bridge this shortfall and that governments engagement might be a crucial determinant of OSI as well as of its potential outcomes However it is hitherto unclear how governments act within OSI
