Halal Food Good Eat Singapore:

Singapore Malay/Muslim Community, 1819-2015 Hussin Mutalib, Rokiah Mentol, Sundusia Rosdi, 2016-06-29

Singapore's Malay Muslim community constituting about 15 per cent of the total population and constitutionally enshrined as the indigenous people of Singapore have had its fair share of progress and problems in the history of this country. While different aspects of the vicissitudes of life of the community have been written over the years, there has not been a singularly substantive published compendium specifically about the community in the form of a Bibliography available. This academic initiative fills this obvious literature gap. The scope and coverage of this Bibliography is manifestly comprehensive, encompassing the different sources of information, print or non print, about the many facets of life of the Republic's Malays Muslims, such as education, economy, politics, culture, history, health, language, religion, arts, and more. The result is a Bibliography that is arguably the most expansive, if not exhaustive, treasury collection about the community ever available anywhere. Scholars and researchers in particular, and the public in general, should find this Bibliography a highly valuable, indispensable source of information about the rich and varied life of Singapore's Malay Muslim community stretching a period of two centuries from the time of Stamford Raffles in 1819 until today. The Editors, Hussin Mutalib, Ph.D., a senior academic with the National University of Singapore, Rokiah Mentol, and Sundusia Rosdi, former senior librarians with Singapore's National Library Board, are assisted by professional and experienced librarians. Halal Food Febe Armanios, Bogac Ergene, 2018-04-02. Food trucks announcing halal proliferate in many urban areas, but how many non-Muslims know what this means other than cheap lunch? Here, Middle Eastern historians Febe Armanios and Bogac Ergene provide an accessible introduction to halal, permissible food in the Islamic tradition, exploring what halal food means to Muslims and how its legal and cultural interpretations have changed in different geographies up to the present day. Historically, Muslims used food to define their identities in relation to co-believers and non-Muslims. Food taboos are rooted in the Quran and prophetic customs, as well as writings from various periods and geographical settings. As in Judaism and among certain Christian sects, Islamic food traditions make distinctions between clean and impure and dietary choices and food preparation reflect how believers think about broader issues. Traditionally, most halal interpretations focused on animal slaughter and the consumption of intoxicants. Muslims today, however, must also contend with an array of manufactured food products: yogurts, chocolates, cheeses, candies, and sodas filled with unknown additives and fillers. To help consumers navigate the new halal marketplace, certifying agencies, government and non-government bodies, and global businesses vie to meet increased demands for food piety. At the same time, blogs, cookbooks, restaurants, and social media apps have proliferated, while animal rights and eco-conscious activists seek to recover halal's more wholesome and ethical inclinations. Covering practices from the Middle East and North Africa to South Asia, Europe, and North America, this timely book is for anyone curious about the history of halal food and its place in the modern world. Eating Together Jean Duruz, Gaik Cheng

Khoo,2014-12-18 Accepting the challenge of rethinking connections of food space and identity within everyday spaces of public eating in Malaysia and Singapore the authors enter street stalls hawker centers markets cafes restaurants food streets and ethnic neighborhoods to offer a broader picture of the meaning of eating in public places The book creates a strong sense of the ways different people live eat work and relax together and traces negotiations and accommodations in these dynamics The motif of rojak Malay meaning mixture together with Ien Ang s evocative together in difference enables the analysis to move beyond the immediacy of street eating with its moments of exchange and remembering Ultimately the book traces the political tensions of different people living together and the search for home and identity in a world on the move Each of the chapters designates a different space for exploring these cultures of mixedness and their contradictions whether these involve old and new forms of sociality struggles over meanings of place or frissons of pleasure and risk in eating differently Simply put Eating Together is about understanding complex forms of multiculturalism in Malaysia and Singapore through the mind tongue nose and eyes
