Retrospective Columns Samuel Holzman,2025-10-07 An innovative study of how and why ancient Greek builders sometimes combined older and contemporary carving styles when making capitals The Ionic order of ancient Greek architecture gradually evolved over the course of the sixth century BCE In Retrospective Columns Samuel Holzman examines an overlooked group of nine Ionic monuments that are varied in design but have capitals that combine the pillowy convex volutes of sixth century Ionia on one side and the crisp concave volutes of more contemporary styles on the other Such hybrid capitals had a surprising longevity and range spanning Greece Italy and Turkey between 550 and 250 BCE Why did ancient Greek builders sometimes revert to older carving styles and combine them with newer ones One old theory is that outdated styles were a labor saving shortcut a notion Holzman puts to rest with a marble carving experiment that recreated the volutes of one capital Rather he argues that hybrid capitals represented an important parallel to other trends in Greek art notably bilingual Attic vases which combined older and newer painting techniques for sheer visual delight By studying the chiaroscuro carving effects and painted polychrome decoration of Ionic architecture Holzman shows that ancient viewers were primed to look for differences in such details which the book illustrates with many original drawings and diagrams Exploring works of Ionic architecture from different periods in Ionia the Cyclades Athens and the Northern Aegean Retrospective Columns demonstrates that their builders ultimately returned to outmoded elements to establish continuity with the past reinforcing community identities and architectural tradition the beginning of a new millennium hoping for a new world and a new dawn Optics Otto Laporte, 2012-12-02 Optics Lectures on Theoretical Physics Volume IV focuses on the study of optics particularly on the refraction and reflection of light Composed of six chapters the book focuses first on the historical outline of geometrical physical and physiological optics This discussion is followed by the review of basic principles of ideal and natural light and Fresnel's equations on reflection and refraction of light The optics of moving media and sources is discussed next This topic covers Doppler effect the Michelson experiment and the quantum theory of light The theory of dispersion is also presented as well as the ultraviolet resonance anomalous dispersion Normal Zeeman effect and the wave mechanical theory of dispersion The next part of the book covers crystal optics including active crystals and fluids the problem of double refraction and the optical symmetry of crystals The theory of diffraction and related experiments are also noted Numerical analyses and representations are presented in this consideration Considering the value of the discussions the readers including scholars and readers interested to study the physics involved in optics will find this book a vital source of data Allen's Commercial Organic Analysis Alfred Henry Allen, 1912 RURAL AND WORKMAN, 1890
