Lifelines Eleanor Bertin, 2016-03-03. Life had been going swimmingly for biologist Dr Robert Fielding until he was bewildered by a squall that still threatens to shipwreck him. Tormented by the losses in his life, he can find a dozen reasons why he doesn't need the friendship of his new neighbour Anna Fawcett. After all, the senior and her disabled son aren't exactly in his league. But how is he supposed to turn down fresh cinnamon buns? And Robert hasn't bargained on his neighbour's innocent probing questions. They erode his faith in naturalism and collide with his assumptions about life, love and truth. Have his foundational beliefs been the cause of his personal losses? As he searches for answers, Anna's example of loving integrity keeps him coming back. Or maybe it's her homemade pies. Yet to risk rethinking his core convictions for a chance at personal peace would expose his soul and tear open an old wound. Others in the neighbourhood too are under Anna's thrall: a teacher facing a crisis pregnancy, a crusty cat lady, a cancer-ridden conspiracy theorist, a Cambodian immigrant family. Each is touched by the power of her obscure and ordinary life.
