Private Schools and State Laws ,1924 Private Education Geoffrey Walford,2005-11-24

Private schools are central to the reproduction of social inequality For example whilst in the UK providing only about seven per cent of the school population about half of the undergraduates at Oxford and Cambridge still come from the private sector Private schools have long been associated with privilege and elitism While this traditional elitist aspect to the private sector is still central the private school sector is actually far more diverse that is usually acknowledged It now includes many small schools and faith based schools that may not offer the traditional advantages of the private sector but which provide a particular environment deemed desirable by parents In spite of their educational and social importance there has been very little academic research and writing on private schools The proposed book will be the culmination of Professor Walford s research into private schools over the past twenty years

Governing by Inspection Sotiria Grek,Joakim Lindgren,2014-09-19

In recent decades governing practices in education have become highly contradictory deregulation and decentralisation are accompanied by re regulation and increased centralisation contributing to considerable governing tensions in and across different national systems and within the emergent European education policy space On the one hand there is the persistence of performance monitoring through target setting indicators and benchmarks and on the other the promotion of self evaluation and light touch regulation that express a softer governance turn and promote self regulation as the best basis for constant improvement Drawing on research undertaken into three national systems this edited volume explores the attempts to manage these tensions in Europe through the development of inspection as a governing practice Inspectorates and inspectors offer key locations for the exploration of governing tensions positioned as they are between the international the national and the local and institutional and with responsibility for both regulation and development All three national systems offer contrasting approaches to inspection all of which have changed considerably in recent years Governing by Inspection positions inspection in the framework of changing education policy and politics and in a period of intensive policy development and exchange in Europe It will be key reading for academics researchers and postgraduate students in the fields of education political science and social policy
