Wisconsin Lore for Boys and Girls Susan Burdick Davis, 1931 The Archaeology of Maritime Landscapes Ben Ford, 2011-05-21 Maritime cultural landscapes are collections of submerged archaeological sites or combinations of terrestrial and submerged sites that reflect the relationship between humans and the water These landscapes can range in size from a single beach to an entire coastline and can include areas of terrestrial sites now inundated as well as underwater sites that are now desiccated. However, what binds all of these sites together is the premise that each aspect of the landscape—cultural, political, environmental, technological, and physical—is interrelated and can not be understood without reference to the others. In this maritime cultural landscape approach, individual sites are treated as features within the larger landscape, and the interpretation of single sites adds to a larger analysis of a region or culture. This approach provides physical and theoretical links between terrestrial and underwater archaeology as well as prehistoric and historic archaeology, consequently providing a framework for integrating such diverse topics as trade, resource procurement, habitation, industrial production, and warfare into a holistic study of the past. Landscape studies foster broader perspectives and approaches, extending the study of maritime cultures beyond the shoreline. Despite this potential, the archaeological study of maritime landscapes is a relatively untried approach with many questions regarding the methods and perspectives needed to effectively analyze these landscapes. The chapters in this volume, which include contributions from the United States, the United Kingdom, Norway, and Australia, address many of the theoretical and methodological questions surrounding maritime cultural landscapes. The authors comprise established scholars as well as archaeologists at the beginning of their careers, providing a healthy balance of experience and innovation. The chapters also demonstrate parity between method and theory, where the varying interpretations of culture and space are given equal weight with the challenges of investigating both wet and dry sites across large areas.

Ancient Effigy Mound Landscapes of Upper Midwestern North America Robert A. Birmingham, Amy L. Rosebrough, 2025-07-31. First comprehensive overview of the effigy mound phenomenon of the Upper Midwest of North America c. 700–1100 CE. This book provides an overview of the effigy mound phenomenon of the Upper Midwest of North America, centered on southern Wisconsin. Between c. AD 700 and 1100, Late Woodland people of the Upper Midwest used the topography and other natural features to create vast ceremonial landscapes consisting of thousands of earthen mounds sculpted into animals and animal spirits: bears, birds, panthers, snakes, etc. that mirrored their belief and clan-based social structure and served an important role in mortuary ritual. In so doing, the Late Woodland people created quite visible three-dimensional maps of ancient cosmology and social structures that are similar to the beliefs and social systems of more recent Native people. The effigy landscapes of this region are unique. The authors document the nature of the effigy mound landscapes, describing the use of topography and natural features to create them and provide the interpretation that these were living landscapes in which ancestral animals and the supernatural were ritually brought back to life in a continuous cycle of death and rebirth of the earth and its people. Subsistence patterns, artifacts, settlement systems, and changes in these through the effigy building era are examined, and effigy mound societies are compared and contrasted with preceding and succeeding societies as well as contemporaneous societies in adjacent regions. Examples are drawn from throughout the effigy mound region. The book is profusely illustrated with high-quality historical and modern maps, photographs of effigy mounds, including aerials and LiDAR imagery, providing three-dimensional images.

Theory, Method,

and Practice in Modern Archaeology Robert J. Jeske, Douglas K. Charles, 2003-03-30 This book presents 18 essays by leading scholars covering mortuary analysis the archaeology of foraging and agricultural societies cultural evolution and archaeological method and theory which transcend the processual postprocessual debate in archaeology and provide examples of how archaeologists think about and go about studying the past As archaeology encounters the 21st century debate over the nature of the discipline dominates professional discourse Archaeologists are embattled over isms processualism postprocessualism scientism and humanism are ubiquitous buzzwords in the literature Yet archaeology is a craft practiced by individuals learned from and influenced by other individuals Sometimes a person through sheer force of intellectual spirit rises above the debate to make a mark on the field in ways that cross out schools paradigms and factions It is fitting to look back at the influence one such individual has had on archaeological methods theory data collection and syntheses over the last half century This volume draws on the experience of students and colleagues who worked with and were strongly influenced by James A Brown s approach to the past The volume is divided into five categories each reflecting one distinctive facet of Brown s affect on archaeology mortuary analysis foraging and horticultural societies complex agriculturalists proto historic and historic societies and method and theory These diverse categories with articles by archaeologists of many backgrounds are drawn together by the threads of Brown s intellectual legacy Not all authors here are in agreement with Brown s views on their subjects but all acknowledge that his work in the area sets a standard that needs to be met if one is to succeed

Voices in the Valley Frank R. Kramer, 1964 Into the valleys of the great interior of America came waves of immigrants not like the slow thrust of glaciers but tumbling swiftly from foreign lands and from states nearby one upon the other These massive movements left records anonymous but none the less vivid the basins and ramifications of folk belief It is about such beliefs that this book is written They emerge in dramas staged in Canadian forests and Kentucky farms where Huron rituals and Methodist revivals renewed the awful sense of intimacy with the sources of natural and spiritual power They are the colors of the rainbow that arched over Champlain s dream of fresh waters and the terrestrial paradise of the Jesuit missions They are crystallized in symbols of bankbarns and homesteads symbols that sum up the little family worlds of Pennsylvania Germans and settlers in the Middle West and image their differing ideals of progress The author s chief concern is to develop the relationship between reality and myth to show the influence of folklore on human thought and motivation and the manner in which folklore has been used to further human goals whether consciously or unconsciously He does this by examining episodes from the richly varied history of ethnic groups in America s great heartland French explorers and missionaries in their contacts with the Huron Indians religion Peter Cartwright s camp meetings industry Henry Ford s Highland Park plant agrarian revolt a session of the Grange and the New England Yankees and Pennsylvania Germans who migrated respectively to the upper and lower Middle West The study concludes with an exposition of the importance of discovering and evaluating the motives of a whole people rather than by the traditional study of leaders and selected groups      Widener Library Shelflist: Canadian history and literature Harvard University.
