Justice Is Green:

The justice and security green paper Great Britain: Parliament: Joint Committee on Human Rights, 2012-04-04 The Joint Committee on Human Rights JCHR calls for statutory clarification of law on disclosure of national security sensitive material but finds no case for more extensive change The Government has failed to make the case for extending closed material procedures to all civil proceedings and to inquests the Government has not demonstrated that the fairness concern on which it relies to justify the proposal is in fact a real and practical problem The Committee believes that closed material procedures are inherently unfair and the proposals in the Green Paper are a radical departure from longstanding traditions of open justice and fairness Nor does it accept that replacing the current law governing disclosure of sensitive material the law of Public Interest Immunity or PII with closed material procedures is justified The rule of law requires that decisions about the disclosure of material in legal proceedings be taken by judges not ministers and the current legal framework of PII has not been shown to be inadequate There is a case however for that legal framework to be made clearer in the way in which it applies to national security sensitive material and the Committee suggests how that could be done by legislation and changes to the Coroners Rules and guidance The Committee regrets that the Green Paper overlooks the very considerable impact of its proposals on the freedom and ability of the media to report on matters of public interest and concern Green

Transitional Justice Rachel Killean, Lauren Dempster, 2025-06-30 This book rethinks the boundaries of transitional justice urging scholars and practitioners to confront the often overlooked nexus between mass violence and ecological harm Through an in depth analysis of the field s limitations such as its anthropocentric legalism neocolonial practices and alignment with neoliberalism the book critiques the historical marginalisation of Nature in transitional justice discourse and practice It argues that ignoring environmental harm not only undermines the possibility of holistic justice but also perpetuates structural violence and inequality In response the book sketches a greener transitional justice integrating principles from environmental justice Indigenous knowledge systems and ecocentric perspectives It explores the possibilities of recognising Nature as a victim of mass violence adapting existing mechanisms to incorporate environmental harm and fostering transformative approaches premised on the interdependence of human and ecological well being This book is written for students researchers and practitioners of transitional justice and fields related to conflict transformation peacebuilding environmental protection and development An Introduction to Green Criminology and
