Justinian39s Institutes:

Maritime Transport Services in the Law of the Sea and the World Trade Organization Chuyang Liu,2009 Since the beginnings of international law the law of the sea has been of paramount importance for international trade Yet this area of law and international trade regulations have developed as two distinct areas with little interface with each other As the GATT WTO emerged in parallel to the LOS Convention since the 1970s both bodies have made extensive efforts in international treaty making However the relationship between trade regulations and the law of the sea has hardly been explored The author examines some key aspects of this relationship in particular port entry access to cargo in coastal shipping cabotage and access to cargo in international shipping The inclusion of services in WTO law will render this relationship of great importance in the future as the agreement extensively covers maritime transport It is just a matter of time until the current exclusion of maritime transport under special exemptions will be reviewed in future negotiations The book provides the background and a normative basis for approaching some of the problems which members of the WTO will have to address in coming years It also deals briefly with the problem of choice of law and competing jurisdictions between trade law and maritime law

Moyle,2013-05-21 The Institutes of Justinian Institutiones Justiniani or Justinian s Institutes is a unit of the Corpus Juris Civilis the sixth century codification of Roman law ordered by the emperor Justinian I It is largely based upon the Institutes of Gaius a Roman jurist of the second century A D The other units in the Corpus Juris Civilis are the Digest the Codex Justinianus Code of Justinian and the Novellae Constitutiones New Constitutions or Novels

Justinian's Institutes was one part of his effort to codify Roman law and to reform legal education of which the Digest also was a part. Whereas the Digest was to be used by advanced law students, Justinian's Institutes was to be a textbook for new students. The need for a new text for first year students was addressed as early as 530 in the constitution Deo auctore where reference is made to something which may be promulgated to replace the elementary works so that the raw intelligence of the student, nourished by a simple diet, may proceed more easily to advanced legal studies. Under the supervision of Tribonian, two law professors, Theophilus and Dorotheus, were assigned to extract statements about the basic institutions of Roman law from the teaching books created by writers of authority as defined in the Law of Citations. The bulk of this new Institutes is the Institutes of Gaius, much of it taken verbatim, but it also uses material from the Institutes of Marcian, Florentinus, Ulpian, and perhaps Paulus, the other writers of authority. There is some debate over which of the commission members is responsible for what part of the new Institutes. Most recently it has been suggested that Theophilus and Dorotheus created the extracts taken from the older works while Tribonian revised and added new imperial laws. This new version of the Institutes was published on November 21, 533, and promulgated with the Digest on December 30, 533. These new Institutes were not only a textbook for first year law students but, according to the decree that promulgated them, C. Tanta, they carried the force of law. The Institutes of Justinian is arranged much like Gaius's work, being divided into four books covering persons, things, and actions. Unlike the Digest, the extracts do not provide inscriptions indicating from whom the original material was taken. First year law students used Justinian's Institutes as their textbook for centuries.
