

—Let us also go ! says the cotton (who, like the rice, has got a cuirass) and all the vegetables shout : let us also go ! and the whole lot follow on foot.

But they have to pass through the village of the chameleon, a big lord known under the name of Tamin Wa Taman.

—Brothers, say the three leaders to the buffalo and the horse, don't make noise as you walk, we ought to be able to pass without being heard ! But brother horse continually makes krank krak, and brother buffalo tukak.

The Chameleon hears and looks.

—O men, he shouts, do come and have a drink of beer !

The leaders dare not refuse.

—Where do you come from ?

—We have taken the rice away.

—And his mother, what did she say ?

—Let his root be like the foot of the buffalo, and his ear like the tail of a horse.

—But if it is like that, you will have too much of it, let his root be like my foot and his ear like my head ! Then an old man and an old woman, Phauman and Phyi-man, both blind, come near and feel the rice to see how he is.

But they are pricked by the prickly and at once fall dead ; the leaders in a fright, carefully pull out of the rice the prickly and give it to the hornet, who up to this had nothing to defend himself. The blind couple is at once transformed into Nats and promise, for a consideration, that they both will protect the rice. The men agree and take again the road towards the earth where they soon arrive in high spirits with the rice, the cotton and all the vegetables.

From that time men cultivate vegetables and have to eat ; the rice, it is true, does not grow high and has no longer any prickly to defend itself. But the old couple Kachin is a compromise response to the polarised political doctrines of gumsa and gumlao. Nearly one third of this book consists of Chapter V entitled The Structural Categories of Kachin Gumsa Society. It is concerned with the interpretation of a series of verbal concepts and their interconnections. This long chapter is placed between a relatively short account of a particular Kachin community directly observed (Chapter IV) and a series of chapters (VI, VII, VIII) containing secondhand ethnographic and historical evidence.

These essays examine the importance of historical consciousness and the role of historiography in ethnic situations, exploring the many ways in which ethnic groups select history, write or rewrite it, rescue, appropriate or ignore it, forget or traduce it. Drawing on expert knowledge of regions ranging from the Amazon to contemporary Germany, the contributors bring anthropological and historical understanding to answer these questions and investigate major topics such as the relationship between ethnic, national and state identifications and the cultural work of creating them. Examples include Afrikaners and Northern Ireland Protestants as well as Mormons and Catalans. Bringing together a variety of themes that have recently become the focus of study, ethnicity, the uses and nature of history and the likelihood of objectivity in historical telling, the book will be of great interest to students in the social sciences, anthropology, politics, history and international relations.

Claude Lévi-Strauss Maurice Godelier, 2018-08-07

Anthropologist Claude Lévi Strauss was among the most influential thinkers of the twentieth century. In this rigorous study, Maurice Godelier traces the evolution of his thought. Focusing primarily on Lévi Strauss's analysis of kinship and myth, Godelier provides an assessment of his intellectual achievements and legacy. Meticulously researched, Lévi Strauss is written in a clear and accessible style. The culmination of decades of engagement with Lévi Strauss's work, this book will prove indispensable to students of his thought and structural anthropology more generally.
