Catalog of Copyright Entries. Third Series Library of Congress. Copyright Office, 1973 Voice Barbara A. Fox, Paul J. Hopper, 1994-01-01 The volume's central concern is grammatical voice traditionally known as diathesis and its classical manifestations as Active Middle and Passive While numerous problems in the meaning syntax and morphology of these categories in Indo-European remain unsolved their counterparts in more exotic languages have raised still further questions What discourse functions and diachronic events unite voice as a recognizable phenomenon across languages How are they typically grammaticalized What stages do children go through in learning them How does voice link up with ergativity and with other categories and constructions such as the Inverse and the Antipassive The authors in this volume have different perspectives on these problems they discuss voice e.g. from a typological universal view in relation to language acquisition and to ergativity and from diachronic and cross-linguistic perspectives ubiquitous grammatical category Breaking with much past work Harbour establishes three core theses one empirical one theoretical and one metatheoretical Together these redefine the data subsumed under the rubric of person simplify the feature inventory that a theory of person must posit and restructure the metatheory in which feature theory as a whole resides At its heart Impossible Persons poses a simple question of the possible versus the actual in how many ways could languages configure their person systems in how many do they configure them and what explains the size and shape of the shortfall Harbour's empirical thesis that the primary object of study for persons are partitions not syncretisms transforms a sea of data into a categorical problem of the attested and the absent Positioning innovatively that features denote actions not predicates he shows that two features alone generate all and only the attested systems This apparently poor inventory yields rich explanatory dividends covering the morphological composition of person its interaction with number its connection to space and properties of its semantics and linearization Moreover the core properties of this approach are shared with Harbour's earlier work on number features Jointly these results establish an important metatheoretical corollary concerning the balance between richness of feature semantics and restrictiveness of feature inventories This corollary holds deep implications for how linguists should approach feature theory in future Causatives and Causation Jae Jung Song, 2014-06-11 Causatives and Causation is the first comprehensive study of causative constructions found in the world's languages This important new research based on a data base of more than 600 languages not only investigates fully the richness and variety of causative types but also presents an alternative perspective to the traditional typological approach The new typology enables a better understanding of how the human mind cognizes causation and how this is reflected in language Causatives and Causation is also an important attempt to integrate language typology with diachrony by constructing a diachronic model of causative affixes on the basis of this new typology Drawing on the theoretical insight of Role and Reference Grammar this book provides a case study of the causative constructions in Korean providing additional support for both the proposed new typology and the diachronic model It also examines the pragmatic foundations of causatives an important but previously unexplored area of study Kapampangan Dictionary Michael L.
